W. C. Allen of the Snake Island Club Declares Fishing To Be the Only Life

Became a Member of London Anglers' Club Eleven Years Ago.

"Fishing is the only life." Such is the opinion of W. C. Allen, who is a member of the Snake Island Fishing Club, and wouldn't miss a season in the north for anything. "It's the only real holiday," says Mr. Allen. "You get away by yourself and it's perfect relaxation. Up at Snake Island we start off in boats at 9 in the morning and fish until 6. Or perhaps we don't leave until 4 in the afternoon and then we stay out until 8. Our catch is usually large, for the black bass abound in the island channels of Lake Huron."

Mr. Allen is a true fisherman, and so declines to magnify his skill as an angler by relating marvellous "fish stories" about gigantic bass, which were conquered by his strategy. His fish are but the average of from one to two and half pounds. He confesses quite frankly that two and half-pounders are the largest bass he has ever caught.

Can Shave Out of Doors. Mr. Allen is a very approachable sort of man, the type who would be a jolly companion at just such a fishing camp as Snake Island provides. He would be able to shave in the open, out of a tin can, before a cracked mirror hanging on the side of a shack, and really find humor in the situation. The majority of men would resort to a flow of strong language and probably kick over the woodpile.

And outdoor shaving, as well as outdoor eating, is all a part of the life of a fisherman, and helps to make up his charm. Snake Island was purchased about twenty-five years ago by a group of London businessmen, who organized themselves into the Snake Island Fishing Club. Since that time the membership has changed, about eleven men now holding shares. Mr. Allen became a member eleven years ago.

Every year these men go north in the summer to fish in the channels among the many fishing islands of the Bruce peninsula. Early in the season the bass are to be found in the small bays, says Mr. Allen, but later on, toward the end of July, they work out among the islands. For the best season, worms are used as bait, but later the bass become more fastidious and will not bite unless they are given minnows.

Hundred Fishing Islands. The fishing islands, of which there are about a hundred, begin about fifteen miles north of Southampton, and are scattered in a line up to the head of the peninsula. Curiously the east shore of Lake Huron and the east side of Georgian Bay are better bass fishing grounds than the west shores.

Sleeping Quarters. Snake Island, No. 36, of the fishing islands, is located just opposite Red Bay, which is a ten-mile drive from Warton. From Red Bay the island is reached by sailing vessel or motorboat. A collection of shacks on the island, which covers about eleven acres, form the headquarters of the fishers. The largest shack is lovingly known as "The Tabernacle," and is used as sleeping quarters. The party up there now reports a wonderful catch during the past week on account of the fine weather. "The weather has a great deal to do with the fisherman's success," says Mr. Allen. "After a storm on the lake, it takes two days for the waters to settle down, and the fish are biting." Mr. Allen starts for the fishing islands on July 21 with a second party, and is looking forward to a very fine catch.

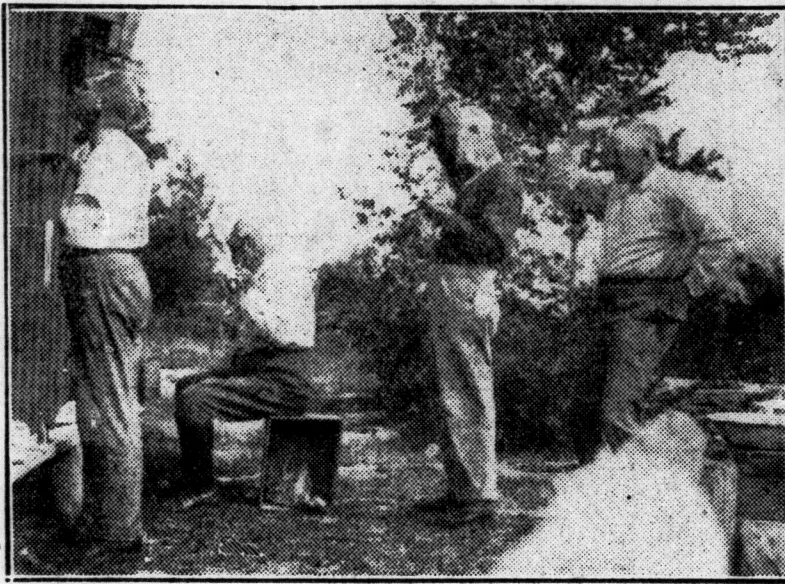

WOMEN OPEN CANTEEN FOR ORANGE CELEBRATION

Special to The Advertiser. Chatham, July 12.—A canteen was operated by the Women's Auxiliary and the G. W. V. A. today, when the Orangemen held their annual celebration in this city. A special meeting of the auxiliary and veterans was held on Monday evening for the purpose of making final arrangements. Mrs. Turnbull, president of the W. A., was in charge. The canteen was located in the armory, where lemonade and other stands were erected for the accommodation of the many delegates. Sandwiches, coffee, tea, etc., were sold. The proceeds will be divided equally.

AFTER THE DAY'S CATCH.

SHAVING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

Mirrors are rare at the Snake Island camp and chairs rarer. A party of London fishermen are shown above busily engaged with razors and soap. The man at the extreme left, stretching his neck, is E. C. Mitchell. John I. A. Hunt is sitting next on the parlor chair. W. C. Allen, standing, can scarcely be recognized under his mask of soap. Alfred Hewton, at the extreme right, is vainly trying to get a squirt at the family mirror.

TEMPO GARDEN PARTY MOST SUCCESSFUL YET

Fine Program Presented On Spacious Grounds of J. O. Birtwhistle.

The annual garden party of the Presbyterian Church at Tempo was held Wednesday evening after a postponement of more than a week. It was literally the biggest and best yet, although weather conditions threatened to play havoc with it again. Tempo has been famed for wonderful garden parties, but this year's has set a still higher standard and established a new record.

The beautiful and spacious grounds of J. O. Birtwhistle were decorated and accommodated with seats, but the crowds filled the seating accommodation and overflowed on every side. No doubt the presence of well-known entertainers had much to do with bringing out the people from 15, 20 and 25 miles around. Jas. Pax, the star of the comedy entertainment, was at his best, and was recalled over and over again. The Lyric Ladies' Quartet scored at their first appearance in Tempo. Miss Westland delighted the large crowd with her readings. The Radio novelty Orchestra of London, a new organization, was also in attendance. The proceeds ran well into the hundreds. The Ladies' Aid of the church was in charge.

ORANGE TEA IS HELD AT HOME OF MRS. CAKE

Centennial Ladies Arrange Successful Affair To Mark July 12.

The Orange Tea given yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Joseph Cake, Quebec street, by the ladies of the Centennial Methodist Church, was a delightful affair. The rooms were artistically decorated with orange lilies, and the lights were softly shaded with orange. Mrs. George St. Claire and Mrs. Cake welcomed the many guests, and the tea table, which was adorned with flowers, was presided over by Mrs. M. J. McNamee. Mrs. George St. Claire, Mrs. Fred James, Mrs. Rose Shaw, and Mrs. Edward Tufts assisted in looking after the guests. A most enjoyable program was presented during the afternoon, including solos by Misses Helen Thompson and Lula Somerville, and violin selections by Misses Anne McLean and Kathleen Golby. Misses Muriel Lancaster and Gladys Udy acted as accompanists. Delightful piano numbers were also given by Miss Doris Watts and Joseph Cake. The affair was in aid of the mammoth bazaar of the ladies of the church, which is giving in the fall. Mrs. Joseph Cake acted as convener, assisted by Mrs. George St. Claire, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Fred James, Mrs. Rose Shaw, Edward Tufts, H. Walton, M. J. Watkins, Miss Muriel Lancaster and Miss Margaret James.
