The Warbler.

CHATHAM, SEPTEMBER 26, 1872.

SALUTATORY.

We, the editor of THE WARBLER, feel ourselves called upon to justify our appearance before the public of Chatham with another daily newspaper. A new book must indicate, in its preface, a claim to be read. Otherwise it is an impertinence. A new invention must maintain, on some ground of beauty or ability, its rights to the notice of the community. Otherwise it is a humbug. A new-comer in the town must establish a title to live among live people by contributing something to the common weal. Otherwise he shall be voted a nuisance. We, THE WARBLER, having disdained a hebdomadal apprenticeship, and vaulted at once into position as a diurnal, show cause why. Most respectfully do we pay our devoirs to the public.

The Y. P. S. B. Society, the proprietorship of this journal, have several great philanthropic ends in view.

1. We desire to stimulate the business of this busy town, and shall largely employ in our columns what is confessedly the most effective agency. We admit to our advertisements.

2. We desire to cultivate the taste of the public for "concord of sweet sounds," and we shall inform them from time to time that we provide a first-class article. Muse on our music.

3. We intend to exhibit a collection of curiosities, in comparison with which "Old Curiosity Shop" is as nothing.

4. We intend to promote the amicable relations of social life among young and old; and to enforce and illustrate the precept, "Owe no man anything, but love one another."

5. And finally, we hope that after we have conferred great and lasting benefits on all our patrons, we shall have a slight reward in the form of a large sum of money, to be applied on the main spire of the new W. M. Church, which the Y. P. S. B. Society have undertaken to build.

It will be seen, from the foregoing, that we have chosen a sphere peculiarly our own. We do not intend to cross anybody's path. We expect to be civil as long as we live to our excellent town contemporaries. We hope that they will magnanimously restrain from all tendencies to be jealous, and give us a hearty welcome into the newspaper fraternity by some very flattering remarks.

Rarities on Exhibition at the Music Hall.

Among the curiosities of the Art Exhibition there are to be seen some very odd specimens of the musical instruments in use among the half-civilised nations of men. There is a Chinese Banjo, a really beautiful piece of workmanship, although its musical capabilities may be seriously questioned. By its side is a still more amusing—a genuine Chinese violin, looking more like a croquet mallet than a musical instrument. Then there is a Japanese guitar, which we shall believe has music in it, when we hear it. Another instrument which, no doubt, would respond very sweetly if deftly touched, is the Swiss Mandolin. The first two are the property of Mr. Roe Stephens, of Detroit, and the other two are from the firm of Whittemore & Stephens, music dealers, of that city. They have the thanks of the Y. P. S. B. Society for their most interesting contributions.

One of the chief attractions of the Exhibition, because of its melancholy historical associations, is a piece of the veritable mirror from Holyrood House, used by the beautiful and unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots. How fresh the sad history, almost forgotten, rises in the memory. This relic is kindly furnished by Mrs. Dr. Sive-right.

Other rarities, too numerous to mention now, shall be noticed in following numbers of THE WARBLER.
