

exchanges of the 'VARSITY are not placed on file in our reading room.

It appears that at Victoria—and doubtless at other colleges—the 'VARSITY is placed at the disposal of the students: hence, it is considered as a slight, that neither Acta nor The V. P. Journal is accorded the same privilege here.

Even though the 'VARSITY be not supported by all the students, still it is representative of them, and its interests are identical with theirs. It cannot then be unreasonable to ask access to the papers of other colleges, and it would undoubtedly be beneficial, by broadening the views of our students. At present we learn very little of what is transpiring in sister institutions; so that our ideas of university work must necessarily be limited.

I would suggest, therefore, that your exchanges be placed on file in the reading room.

Truly yours,
E. J.
