
FORTY-THIRD WEEK.

INSOLUBLE PROBLEMS.

The majority of life's insoluble problems don't exist at all: Except as fictions of our brains. The things we can't prove are the things which only a fool would ask us to prove. The quickest reply is to prove the questioner a fool, to his own satisfaction. Only take care or he may turn the tables.