

ted by e it a profes-
f four
along
stance
ntages
g with ortance
one of
harbors

second
province
several

SUMMER PLEASURES AROUND WEYMOUTH.

commerce of the town. St. Mary's Bay is only two miles away and is daily visited by picnic parties. Weymouth boasts of her cherries and certainly she has them in abundance as well as all the other early fruits both wild and "tame." An air of real sociability pervades every one and you can enjoy every minute of the time spent there. The Goodwin House furnishes excellent accommodations at moderate rates. The Weymouth House has a large lawn and shade trees, hammocks, and is always well patronized. If you have a wheel, bring it along; there are plenty of opportunities to use it. An interesting ride is over the road to Yarmouth and past the huts of the Indian settlements. To see the swarthy face of an aboriginal at the door as you approach would perhaps startle the very timid, but there is nothing to fear as they welcome the visitor heartily and endeavor to make you buy their wares.

A. C. Morse has some excellent local views.

Population, about 1,000

Weymouth.

ONLY a short rail ride, after leaving the steamer at Yarmouth, and we are at Weymouth, one of the most picturesque spots imaginable. The town lies on the sloping green hills with the beautiful Sissiboo River at its feet. The laughing and jolly crowds of vacationists that meet the trains every morning would surely indicate that Weymouth had the power of attraction, even if you had not noticed its exceptional beauty of location and environment as you crossed over the long railway bridge before reaching the town. It is a great resort for the young folks from the States because of the amusements offered there in the way of boating, bathing, fishing, band concerts and a thousand and one other of items which go to make a summer vacation pleasant. The Sissiboo is a navigable river, and some large vessels are engaged in handling the

A PART OF WEYMOUTH.