REMOVAL WORK ONLY ACTIVITY

Men Busy Tearing Down Construction of Last Week.

Started Packing at Midnight and Departed in Early Morning.

Queen's Park will have all the aspects of a deserted village by Sunday.

Today it is the scene of almost as much activity as during the busiest days of the exhibition. But the work is all of a destructive nature; at least, in the sense that it is connected with the tearing down and removal of the exhibition.

days of the exhibition. But the work is all of a destructive nature; at least, in the sense that it is connected with the tearing down and removal of the exhibits. Hammers clanged as loudy and steadily today as last Saturday, when they were engaged in putting the exhibits in place.

The traffic today is all outward, and every vehicle is loaded with the remnants of resplendent exhibits, their brief day of glory ended.

The midway took its departure in the early hours this morning. With long years of experience behind them, the packing-up problem was nothing to the show men, and although they did not commence to take down many of the tents until midnight, every arrangement was completed by train time so that when other workers arrived today there was only a blank space where the resplendent tents of the midway had the control of a trunk storm water sewer has been commenced on the Whatneliffer road, empting into the river. This is the beginning of a complete storm water drainage for this part of London, but just how much of it will be completed this year depends targely on weather conditions.

But Often Presents Comedy or Tragedy Phone Call to Jail Not So Far Astray. An amusing incident occurred at the county court here Friday afternoon during the preliminary hearing of Walter McDermott of Yarmouth, charged with horse theft. While the first witness was glving evidence, the telephone behind Squire W. H. Chittick, who presided, began to ring steadily. Finally the exasperated squire seized the receiver and quelled the disturbance. "Hello," said the squire, and everyone in the court "listened in." "No," he continued, "this is not the Grand Opera House, it's the jail, and if you come down here we will lock you up."

The municipality is not required to levy the tax. It merely has the power to do so, and London has chosen to exercise this power. London motorists will exert all their powers to bring about a repeal, as they think it is an injustice to be compelled to pay both a provincial and municipal tax.

Opposition to the tax this year has caused payment to be very slow, so that with only three months of the year remaining only about 2,200 licenses have been taken out, in comparison with the 3,000 sold last year. Some of the offenders have been brought into court, but the prosecution has not been at all general or vigorous, which many persons feel it must be if the remainder of the tax is to be collected by the end of the year. There was a great quantity of produce on the market this morning, but coming. The fall varieties of apples are very few people were prepared to buy, in spite of the fairly large crowds which surrounded the various stalls. "Every-one's gone broke at the fair," declared more than one annoyed vendor, who got sick of perpetually quoting prices and not making any sales. It was evident that quite a number of visitors were still in the city, and visited the market for the sole purpose of comparing the prices at home. Fruit, of course, was the big thing on sale. An interview with George Connor, fruit inspector for this district, revealed the fact that a great number of the ich fruits were now at their best.

Some Fruit at Best. Speaking of peaches, he said: "Albertas are now at their best, and Crawfords have entirely disappeared for this season." Continuing to discuss the other fruits on the market, he made several interesting statements. "Plums are practically done, although there are a few of a very late variety still to be got. This step is more or less of a formal-From the market square this morning came a murmur of indignation, which, if expresed in louder tones, would have rung through the city. It was a protest by every man who brought in a horse and stabled it. The cause was a jump in the cost of thus providing comfort for the animals. "Standing room, with hay, 40 cents." This is the legend printed up in stables around the square which has brought forth complaints, giving notice, as it does, of an increase of 60 per cent. Not many years ago a horse could be stabled and fed with hay for 10 cents, but those days have passed, and recently the cost has stood at 25 cents. This seemed to many quite high enough, but stable owners say it does not pay them, with hay so high, so they have agreed among themselves to make the slight (?) addition of 15 cents, or 60 per cent. officially placed before the city council.

This step is more or less of a formality. The board has already approved a report of a special committee advocating the purchase of seventeen acressens to f the present grounds and discussed the matter with the city council. This discussion, held yesterday at the Fair grounds, was of an informal character, and resolutions presented relative to the matter were held to be out of order.
