When Your Last Brick is Laid

THE building of a house is not all. When your last workman has gone and the contractor has turned the completed job over to you--what then? You have a house--have you a home? Far from it.

A new empty house is the most unfinished looking of all empty houses. It is perhaps the most cheerlessly unhome-like place in the world. Its very newness, its bright plaster and its fresh paint make with one month to choose their goods, and half a year ever which to spread the payments, draperies to make it livable--a new house is a little furniture is absolutely indispensable. So when your new house is finished means when it is furnished.

It is in this connection that we wish to call your attention to our Housefurnishing Club. This is a plan which this store has made a feature twice a year for several years back. We offer home owners the privilege of a charge account in our Housefurnishing Department.
