Hamilton Raises Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars in One Day.

WITH MORE TO FOLLOW Contributions From Factories and Business Places Coming Today.

Hamilton, Monday, Nov. 6.—"Save a Soldier Sunday," which was conducted here yesterday under the auspices of the Canadian Club, resulted in $25,000 being collected through the day.

There was a splendid organization to secure the funds and considering the fact that for the past fortnight the British Red Cross appeal has been carried on, the response was a splendid one.

Among the envelopes were two from Chinamen, who each sent a dollar and a note, saying, "God save the King and soldiers."

the operations of the allies. But, with reasonable good fortune, the allies should soon repeat their achievements of last September.

Before Verdun the French enlarged the area already held by them in front of Fort Vaux by occupying the Village of Vaux and capturing the village of Damloup, situated a mile east of Vaux fort.

Another stage of the Italian advance towards Trieste has been completed. The finishing stroke of this advance took the shape of storming the heights of Monte Volkovjak, of capturing two peaks east of San Grand, and of making an advance of about 1200 yards eastward to a point within 20 yards of Castagnievizza, on the road from Oppachiasella.

Saturday Most Successful Day so Far But Larger Attendance is Expected Next Week.

The circles represented by the women who act daily as Red Cross nurses in selling the tickets, are asked by the convener of the women's committee to make every afternoon a special one by arranging to have tea on the premises and to increase the interest in every way possible in aid of the Red Cross to which cause the proceeds from the exhibit will go.

whole of Vaux Village and Damloup Village. The fall of Damloup shows the French have advanced a mile to the east of Fort Vaux.

The fighting in this region was sharp, but the Germans have withdrawn the bulk of their forces to a new line some distance back.

The French north and east of the Fort of Vaux have progressed considerably down the slopes leading to the Woivrevaux. A fitting revenge.

The abandonment of Fort Vaux is regarded by the military critics as a fitting revenge for the French heavy guns upon the famous German 17-inch mortars.

The British batteries terribly mistimed the German attack on the morning of the 2nd. The British official communication dealing with the operations on Sunday on the Somme front says:

"We attacked at several points along the front, making some progress in the course of the day, accomplishing a series of appreciable advances during the region south of Le Transloy and the district south of the St. Pierre Vaast Wood.

Between Les Boeuifs and Sully-Salliel we pushed our lines several hundred metres in the direction of Le Transloy, east of Sully-Salliel we captured a trench and conquered the greater part of the Village of Salliel. South of this village we attacked from three sides at once the St. Pierre Vaast Wood, which is a powerful position held by the enemy, and made an important advance, capturing successively three trenches, which defended the northern horn of the wood, and also taking the whole line of the enemy's positions on the southwestern outskirts.

"The fighting was particularly bitter on that section of the front. German counter-attacks were brilliantly repulsed with the hand grenades and bayonets.

"In the course of these actions we captured 522 prisoners, of whom 15 were officers.

"The night bank in the region of Douaumont continues. We occupy the eastern edge of Vaux. "Relative calm prevailed on the remainder of the front."

The Germans on Saturday made a determined effort to eject the French from the Village of Sully-Salliel and their attacks were numerous. The French drove them off repeatedly and they left many dead and wounded, adhering to the wire entanglements before their positions.

JACKTARS ARE BUSY ALONG OUR STREETS

Recruits for the Navy Are Doing Very Well Here and in Hamilton.

THE SMILE THAT HELPS

Pleasant Mannered Petty Officers Have Found Twenty-Five Willing to Join.

"Are you getting many?" The tons in which the question was asked was scarcely hopeful, for somehow one scarcely believes that Toronto would produce many boys who would be glad to "sail the ocean blue," even at the call of King and country, for somehow an inclination to either the army or the navy does not come to everyone at a moment's notice, and the craft of the sea is something almost foreign to Canadian life.

Of course one has not forgotten our great lakes and the men required to run the trade and commerce which they are the waterways and the centre, but life on the inland waters is altogether different from life on a man-of-war or battleship, and the safety in repeating the assertion of not being very hopeful of receiving an affirmative when the enquiry was made with which this story opens.

It was then with some surprise that one learned that recruiting for the navy was by no means a hopeless one and the recruiting officers who stood at the door of the recruiting station on Bay street, smiled quite optimistically as he replied:

"Yes; we're getting quite a number. We've got 20 since the beginning of the month, and we're expecting five from Hamilton."

"How do you get them, what line of talk do you use?" was the next query. "Oh!" said the officer, smiling, "I just say, 'How would you like to join up here, chum,' and one felt that the smile that accompanied the question would play no small part in persuading the possible recruit to learn more about the pleasures and perils of life at sea."

There are eight members now in Toronto of the "Sea King" contingent. They are all from the old country, and rank as petty officers; the one with whom the World had a brief interview had been with the trade fleet, he was too modest to say much of personal achievement.

The presence of the Imperial Navy opens up a new phase in the history of the Dominion. There is no doubt but that as time goes on the call to the sea will become more and more popular. In England it has a fascination for the youth of the land which is not shared by any other profession.

Except that one has his footing, so to speak, on the water and the other on the land, the sailor's life on board a battleship and military life in the camp, discipline is pretty much the same. There is drill and a regular routine of duties all tending to preparation for battle which is the inevitable outcome of the call to the sea for promotion in both lines are about equally divided.

"At this juncture in the world's history there is a factor which is even more paramount than either inclination or personal advancement and that factor is duty. There is a duty to fill the trenches and to man the guns, to fill up the trenches, Canada is doing both the one and the other. The sea has not sounded as yet to the majority of Canadian youths."

Those who enlist in Toronto will be sent to Halifax to await shipping. They have their choice of a depot and may go either to Chatham, Devonport or Portsmouth. The time of training is about five months, and this period, as it is so long, is made more interesting by the evolution of which makes some of the most interesting scenarios of the picture world of real everyday life.

Recruits for Army and Navy At Rally in Park Theatre

Seven recruits, one for the navy and six for the army, were obtained last night at an enthusiastic meeting held at the Park Theatre under the auspices of the battalion.

The speakers were Capt. "Joe" Lawson of the 204th Battalion, Serg. Geddes and J. Heron. Patriotic airs were rendered by the Beavers' brass band.

Twelve Men Arrested On Charge of Gambling

Charged with keeping a common gaming house at 249 Niagara street, John Mabel was arrested last night by Plainclothesmen.

When Mr. A. W. Miles gave a lecture on his recent trip to England and France, showing about one hundred views, at St. George's Hall, Elm street, on Thursday evening last, a large gathering of members and officers were present.

POLITICS and POLITICIANS

Montreal, Nov. 5.—(Special)—Hon. E. L. Patenaude, speaking at St. Jean Baptiste, County of Montreal, today in the interests of James Morris, M.P., said that this was the first meeting held since the two highest authorities in the world, viz., the privy council for the judicial, and the Pope for the religious side, had spoken, putting an end to the campaign of insult and injury carried on for three years past by agitators from this province. He said his friends had been traduced and maligned because they had counseled moderation and patience in the Ontario affair; and now these men had discovered that their humiliation and shame that they had no constitutional rights in Ontario, and as they had been so often advised their only hope was thru tolerance and moderation instead of insult and abuse.

Rekeley Street Methodist Church Celebrates Seventy-Ninth Anniversary.

The 79th Anniversary of Berkeley Street Methodist Church and Sunday School was celebrated yesterday with special services. At the morning service, Capt. Rev. F. M. Bell Smith was the guest speaker.

The pastor of the church, whose name is with the colors, is away on military service as chaplain of the 125th Battalion and Rev. W. F. Bowler is acting pastor. The church was suitably decorated for the occasion.

Mr. Justice Riddell said that as a Presbyterian, who had been brought up on the shorter catechism, the idea of a state which was not a state, but a service at first seemed out of place, but not when realized that duty to one's country was second only to duty to God.

One hundred and twenty-five years ago next month, said he, Ontario became distinct from Lower Canada and was settled by Americans who remained loyal to their oath of allegiance to their King and flag. Rather than break that oath and separate themselves from the empire, they came to the province. Later they were followed by the Scotchmen, the Irishmen and lastly by the Englishmen.

STATE MAY BE NEUTRAL BUT NOT THE CITIZENS

No Power Can Hold in Leash the Sympathy of People, Says Bishop Brent.

Visitor From Philippine Islands Delivers Fine Sermon on Value of Truth.

"Never in a man's lifetime of a nation's history is it so necessary to have adequate background for life, as when some great crisis occurs, as when we are swept into the midst of a burning battle, and we are asked to do all men must turn their attention to the unchangeable and all powerful God."

These words, by Bishop Brent of the Philippine Islands, speaking at Convocation Hall yesterday morning, introduced a sermon based on the following text:

"Referring to the present war, he said that a state may be neutral, but such a state can never hold in leash the sympathy of its citizens. This moment of exceptional behavior and confusion possessed the whole world. It would be impossible on my part, he said, to come from a country that is not at war and yet not at peace, and give you, in your special tribulation, some instruction from the standpoint of those who are specially privileged. Rather do I feel that I come to a bedside of suffering, not to minister, but to be ministered unto."

He said that there were certain fundamental relations in life which ought never to be disturbed, and if they were, well known they would be disturbed. He referred to the death of Christ, who, even when the gates of death were opened, moved thru, not as one who was vanquished, but as one who was victorious.

"In these latter days," he continued, "we talk of the personality of God. God is not a personality. He includes His Being all that we mean by personality. But He is infinitely more. The minds of men have been filled with the thought of God's fatherhood and man's brotherhood, and we have forgotten the stern, austere, pain-giving character of love. Our theology has turned its back on God, the lawgiver, lives today, and all His law, and penalties for the infringement of those laws are still in force."
