Societe Declares That Young Men Of The Consecutive Party In Quebec Opposed To Policy.

The Standard, Montreal, Oct. 12.—The Montreal Societe de l'Action Conservatrice, who is generally well informed on political matters, says: "The government at the moment on vote large amounts of money for the purpose of creating a great interest in both political and financial matters. I am informed that an important group of Montreal Conservatives, especially the young men, have formed a pact with a view to bringing pressure upon their R. L. Borden so that he should support the government Imperialism."

KEY MARKER CENSORS OUT AT NORTH SYDNEY

The Standard, Sydney, N. S., Oct. 12.—The annual horse races here were viewed by a crowd of over five thousand visitors today and the town a general holiday appearance. The key marker was the only one to appear at the business places at Sydney. These were closed also the schools of both sexes after the exhibition was over to the children.

Three Classes. Classes were on the card at track, and although both were won in rather easy fashion. Carrolls class, featuring the 2.25, and the three minute class. The finished was excellent. The race was a little heavy as a result of the rain, but good time in every heat of both classes.

2.25 class five horses started, taking first money in heats; Dimple K. and Allio were the winners. The 2.25, and the three minute class, Alice Hallfax mare winning all six without any time being taken. The 2.25, and the three minute class, the 2.25 class, with nine in each.

in CARLETON. Bishop of Montreal presided at St. George's church, where the Bishop of Calgary, A. P. Shatford and Rev. O. J. Shatford, the chairman stated the object of the meeting and introduced Mr. Dobbs as the first speaker. As a former pastor of the Rev. Mr. Dobbs felt perfectly and he referred to this fact in his terms. In dealing with the subject of the evening, he cited several cases from a mother's point. This was shown very by the work accomplished in it, where great good had been done. The speaker, Mr. Shatford spoke in a very manner from the Old Testament of the word of God and the selfishness of Christians as illustrated by touching story. Christ had used disciples and had them in mind as apostles. So must followers of Jesus become to tell the joyful gospel every human creature.

Rich Women Called Upon To Work Hard. Hundreds Are Engaged in a Continuous Round of Business, Public and Private—Mrs. Belmont and Mrs. Green.

New York, Oct. 13.—"I am able," says Mrs. H. Green, "to manage my affairs better than any man could manage them; and what woman has done woman can do. If I had let other men do my business for me I most likely wouldn't have had any business to do now, and it is the duty of every woman, I believe, to learn to take care of her own business affairs."

In these days when one out of every five American women is a bread winner, making a total of over four millions of self-supporting women in this country, even the women forming the so-called leisure class work—work hard and long. With an ever increasing number this does not mean working at play and social diversion, but a continuous and systematic exercise of skill and energy.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS AND THE BARRIE DIVORCE

Will Author Playwright Prove His Play Real in Coming Litigation. What Will Be the Post Denier Proceedings—A Remarkable Parallel.

London, Oct. 13.—Everybody has heard of J. M. Barrie, the little known author who became a famous writer of plays. He wrote the Little Minister, Peter Pan, and lately What Every Woman Knows.

Met in London. Pauline Chase went to London to be a great actress. She met Barrie. She did become a great actress, starting in Peter Pan. In a few short years she was the most photographed woman in England.

Maggie's Awakening. Then comes Maggie's awakening. She sees she has fallen on her back. Her eyes fill with tears, her lips are pressed tightly together. But she doesn't quail. She tells her husband she will give him up—for it is for his good.

Loved a Peereess. John Shand in Barrie's play loved a peereess, whose brilliancy in society helped him in his success. What was there in Barrie's mind that pointed the lines of his play as prophetic of his life's crisis?

SUPPLENESS OF FOLD TO BE A FEATURE NOW

Evening Gowns of Graceful Lines and Melting Colors—Many Materials Combined in Exquisite Creations.

New York, N. Y., Oct. 13.—There are lovely gowns of all kinds this fall, but when in attempting to do justice to the evening gowns turned out by the best makers, words fail. Not within our memory have both materials and designs for these creations been so exquisite, and the all fashionable makers prize knowledge nowadays. "Where the line is admirable the detail can take care of itself," says the autocrat of fashion and then having made sure of their lines they proceed to relieve the detail of any responsibility in the matter of taking care of itself by taking exceedingly good care of it.

The important lines are by no means uniform, but they agree in one thing, a clinging suppleness of fold. Heavier and stiffer materials are gaining a slight foothold this year, and this straw on the stream marks a new whim of the current which may work great changes within the next few seasons; but so far the heavier materials are still of great softness and they are so used as to promote length and slowness of line even when they fall in folds.

Draperies here. Draperies are undeniably here, but they are in master hands beautiful draperies, devoid of bunchedness or stiffness and even where skirts are full they do not give the impression of bouffancy, so softly do they hang.

There is no doubt that the vogue of the loose Renaissance and middle ages lines is greatly lessened. The most closely fitted princess in one form or another is nonplussed, but as we prophesied last winter, this winter sees a pronounced revival of the belted bodice and skirt effects, and every great French house has more or less emphatically set its seal of approval upon this tendency.

The clinging princess of Louis XV. and Louis XVI. lines with pointed waist and draped or full skirts, the modes of the '80s with their cords and folds and ruffing, all have their linings and all are modified harmoniously, divested of their most bizarre and spectacular features.

A conspicuous note in the new models is the combination of several materials in one frock, and this combination demands an artist designer if it is to be successful. The tendency is what we have noted earlier in the season, marked in street and afternoon models, but it is even more pronounced among evening and dinner gowns, and many of the experiments are most interesting.

Embroidered messaline evening gowns are this season rendered almost barbaric by the addition of a bodice and draped pannier over-skirt of spangled net.

variety permissible in period ideas has given the makers a chance to fling loose rein to their fancy. They must be seen to be appreciated, these lovely shimmering frocks, compact of graceful line and melting color and wonderful detail, but the temptation to talk of them is irresistible even though chafing against the limitations of the vocabulary.

MRS. CLARENCE MACKAY TALKS OF SUFFRAGE

Defines in Statement Issued Yesterday the Objects of the Equal Franchise Society—The Welfare of Women.

New York, Oct. 13.—Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay having been asked to define the purposes and the position of the "Equal Franchise Society," of which she is the president, has given out the following statement for publication.

"The purpose of the Equal Franchise Society is to promote the welfare of women by securing the national, state and local suffrage franchise for women, because the equal franchise society believes in the political and civil equality of men and women. The electorate should represent the whole nation, and a system of government under which one half of the nation is disfranchised is not a truly representative national system."

"We are inviting people to become members of our society in order to contribute to the advancement of public education by the promotion of our cause. We feel that in order to secure the enfranchisement of women it is not necessary for us to imitate methods which are being used in other countries. American manhood has always treated American womanhood in such a way as to make us feel that we shall ultimately achieve our aim without sensationalism. I will not endorse the militant methods. It has been repeatedly said to men in public life and men in private life that when the women of the United States unite in demanding the vote they will get it. And, I think that is perfectly true, and that therefore, what is needed to further the suffrage cause, is to give all sorts and kinds of women the opportunity of listening to speakers who will explain just what the suffrage will mean to us all. Most of the men I have met are apparently willing to cooperate with us, and have listened to what we have said with courtesy and consideration. It has not been necessary in the past and I do not think it will be necessary in the future, for us to go out to the street corners and shriek our propaganda at the passer-by."

which "Chanteur" indubitably will be the chief feature. Rostand's return to Paris with his family from a watering place 500 miles away to superintend the rehearsals at the Porte St. Martin was effected by automobile in twenty-two hours. He is occupying a magnificent suite of eight rooms at the Hotel Majestic for the period of his stay, after which he probably will return to his Pyrenean seclusion. All French reporters write of him with the awe formerly supposed to be fitting license for royalty only.

The serious as well as the frivolous life of the capital has resumed its normal course. Affairs of state are pre-occupying many minds. Anxious glances are beginning to be more and more directed toward Morocco and Spain. Yet the pessimistic view, so liberally expressed this week by General Amade, who directed the French military reprisals at Casa Blanca, is shared by only a comparative few.

All of which, however, does not prevent Paris from taking the liveliest interest, as of yore, in the opening of the regular theatrical season, of the women who have built fortunes for themselves, but her belief expressed above is the belief of many women of wealth. As a result the life of the average woman, rich in her own right, is no longer spent on flowery beds of ease.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, who was brought up in a very different environment from that of a business office, has since she passed into the control of her estate displayed executive ability. She is her own manager and makes that distinctly clear. Maintaining five or six homes all the while, and this involves such details as the continuous keeping up of the fire in Marble House at Newport which is necessary to preserve the marble; it has never gone out in fourteen years.

Such a programme does not tally with the picture popularly drawn of the rich woman breakfasting lazily in bed late in the day, drifting idly from one pleasure to another; but such a programme is by no means uncommon.

Kingston, Oct. 13.—The four-year-old son of Frank Datoe, of Madoc, some time ago picked up and ate some crystals of lye. His throat and mouth were terribly burned, but gradually healed up. During the past week, however, stricture has developed, and the boy's throat is closing up and he can hardly eat. His recovery is regarded as hopeless.

Special Training. A large percentage of the women who have large means take special training so as to be thorough in business habits. They establish their offices either in their houses or elsewhere and employ a secretary who looks after the mail, social requirements, etc., and one or more secretaries who look after the business side. Many have auditors or accountants who come in to take care of their investments and books, keeping a regular system of ledgers.
