AN ELOQUENT CALCULATION MADE BY REV. DR. TALMAGE.

SOME PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

Busy Bargain Makers Are Asked if They Are as Wise in the Things That Pertain to the Matters of the Soul The Gain of a World Contrasted With the Loss of a Soul.

Washington, Aug. 19.-From Ber-lin, where he preached in the American church to a great congregation, comprising many of his countrymen who are traveling through Europe, Dr. Talmage sends this discourse, in which, by original methods, he calculates spiritual values and urges higher appreciation of things relig-ious. The text is Mark viii, 36, "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" his own soul?'

Men of all occupations are to be found in the assemblies of the house of God, but in these days of extenof God, but in these days of exten-sive business operations a large pro-portion are engaged from Monday morning to Saturday night in bar-gain making. In many of the fami-lies across the breakfast table are discussed questions of loss and gain. You are every day asking yourself: "What is the value of this? What is the value of that?" You would not think of giving something of greater the value of that?" You would not think of giving something of greater value for that which is of lesser val-ue. You would not think of selling that which cost you $10 for $5. If you had a property that was worth $15,000; you would not sell it for $4,000. You are intelligent in all matters of bargain making. Are you us wise'in the things that pertain to the matters of the soul? Christ adapted his instructions to the cir-cumstances of those to whom he spoke. When he talked to fishermen, he spoke of the gospel net. When he spoke. When he talked to ishermen, he spoke of the gospel net. When he talked to the farmers, he said, "A sower went forth to sow." When he talked to the shepherds, he told the parable of the lost sheep. And am I not right, when speaking to an endlemee mede up of herrein mekers audience made up of bargain makers, audience made up of bargain inderts, that I address them in the words of my text, asking, "What shall it pro-fit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" I propose, as far as possible, to es-timate; and compare the value of the property, your next question is about insurance. You would not be silly enough to buy a large warehouse that could not pressibly be insured. You would not have anything to do with enough to construct New Least wounded in the head and wounded in the hands and wounded in the feet and wounded in the side for us, You would not have anything to do with such a property. Now, I ask you what essurance can you give me that this avorld is not going to be barned up? Absolutely none. Geo-loj ists tell us that it is already on fire; U at the heart of the world is one great living coal; that it is just like a ship on fire at sea, the flames not bursting out because the hatches are tept down. And yet you pro-pose to palm off on me, in return for methinks we will be overwhelmed. We will sit some time gazing in silence until some leader amid the white robed choir shall lift the baton of light and give the signal that it is time to wake the song of jubilee, and all heaven then will break forth into "Hosanna, hosanna! Worthy is the Lamb that was slain." pose to palm off on me, in return for my soul, a world for which, in the I argue also the value of the soul from the home that has been fitted up for it in the future. One would have thought that a street of adammy soul, a world for which, in the first place, you give no title, and, in the second place, for which you can give no insurance. "Oh," you say, "the water of the oceans will wash over all the land and pat out the fire." Oh, no. There are inflamma-ble elements in the water, hydrogen ant would have done. No; it is a street of gold. One would have thought that a wall of granite would have done. No; it is the flame of sardonyx mingling with the green of emerald. One would have thought that an occasional doxology would and oxygen. Call off the hydrogen, and then the Atlantic and Pacific oceans would blaze like heaps of shavings. You want me to take this world, for which you can give no have done. No; it is a perpetual possible insurance.

in a straight line, some day one out regiment, perhaps, might pass out of sight; but, no, the ages of heaven do not march in a straight line, but in a circle around about the throne of God. Forever, forever, tramp, Astronomers have swept their tele-scopes through the sky and have found out that there have been 15 world's in the last two centuries that of God. Forever, forever, tramp, tramp! A soul so bought, so equip-ped, so provided for, must be a have disappeared. At first they looked just like other worlds. Then they got deeply red-they worlds. Then they got deeply red-they were on fire. Then they got ashen, showing they were burned down. Then they lisappeared, moving that even the ashes were scattered. And, if the geologists be right in his prophecy, then our world is to go in the same priceless soul, a majestic soul, a tremendous soul. Now, you have seen the two properties-the world, the soul-one perishable, the other immortal; one unsatisfying, the other capable of ever increasing felicity. Will you then our world is to go in the same way. And yet you want me to ex-change my soul for it. Ah, no, it is trade? Will you trade even? Re-member, it is the only investment you can make. If a man sell a bill a world that is burning now. I remark, also, that this world, is a property with which everybody of goods worth $5,000 and he is cheated out of it, he may get $5,000 who has taken it as a possession has had trouble. Now, between my house and my church in Brooklyn there was a reach of land which was not built on. I asked what was the somewhere else, but a man who in-vests his soul invests all. Losing that, he loses all. Saving that, he saves all. In the light of the text it seems to me as if you were offer-ing your soul to the highest bidder, and I hear you say: "What is bid not built on. I asked what was one matter, and they replied that every-body who had anything to do with that property got into trouble about it. It is just so with this world and I hear you say. "I what is not for it, my deathless spirit? What is bid for it?" Satan says, "I will bid the world." You say: "Begone! That is no equivalent. Soll my soul everybody that has had anything to do with it as a possession has been do with it as a possession has been in perplexity. How was it with Lord Byron? Did he not sell his immor-tal soul for the purpose of getting the world? Was he satisfied with for the world? No! Begone!" But there is some one else in the audience not so wise as that. He says, "What is bid for my immortal soul?" Satan says, "I will bid the world." "The world? Going at that, going at that, going! Gone!" the possession? Alas, alas, the poem graphically describes his case when I find the world was no more to drink. There is the world now. I shall say no more about it. Make up your mind for yourself, as I shall be-fore God have to make up my mind for myself about for myself about the value of this world. I cannot afford to make a now come down upon you and show you the vanity of this world and the mistake for your soul. Now let us look at the other prop-erty—the soul. We cannot make a immense importance of Christ's re-ligion and the infinite value of your erty-the soul. We cannot make a bargain without seeing the compara-tive value. The soul! How shall I estimate the value of it? Well, by its exquisite organization. It is the most wonderful piece of mechanism ever put together. Machinery is of value in proportion as it is mighty and silent at the some time. You own immortal souls, what an hour this would be! What a moment finite price for it? Do you know and silent at the same time. You look at the engine and the machinery in the Philadelphia mint, and as you see it performing its wonderful work you will be surprised to find how si-lently it goes. Machinery that roars and tears soon destroys itself; but silent machinery is often most effective. Now, so it is with the soul of man, with all its tremendous fac-ulties; it moves in silence. Judgment, without any racket, lifting its scales; memory, without any noise, bring-ing down all its treasure; conscience taking its judgment seat without any excitement; the understanding and the will all doing their work—venot willing to go down himself. No locity, majesty, might, but silence, silence. You listen at the door of one seemed willing to go. The pas-sengers gathered at one end of the your heart. A plain sailor said, 'I'll surgeon sets it: the eye becomes in-fiamed, the apothecary's wash cools go, sir,' and he wrapped himself in . a coarse piece of canvas and went down and was gone but a few thoit; but a soul off the track, unbalced, no human power can readjust it. With one sweep of its wing it circles the universe and overvaults the throne of God. Why, in the hour of ped and the machinery was adjust-ed. The captain cried to the ments when the escaping steam stop-The captain cried to the pas-gers: 'All saved! Let us go death the soul is so mighty it throws sengers: 'All saved! Let us go down below and see what has be-come of the poor fellow.' They went down. There he lay dead.'' Vica-rious suffering! Died for all! Oh, aside the body as though it were a toy. It drives back medical skill as impotent. It breaks through the cir-cle of loved ones who stand around the dying couch. With one leap it springs beyond star and moon and sun and chasms of immensity. It is superior to all material things! do you suppose that those people on the ship ever forgot, ever can for-get, that poor fellow? "No," they say: "it was through his sacrifice that I got ashore." The time came when our whole race must die unless come one should endure torture and No fire can consume it; no floods can drown it; no rocks can crush it; and walls can impede it; no time can exhaust it. It wants no bridge on which to cross a chasm. It wants no plummet with which to sound a depth. A soul so mighty, so swift, some one should endure torture and sorrow and shame. Who shall come to the rescue? Shall it be one of the seraphim? Not one. Shall it be one of the cherubim? Not one. Shall it so silent, must be a priceless soul. You cannot test the full power of of the cherubin? Not one. Shall it be an inhabitant of some pure and unfallen world? Not one. Then Christ said, "Lo, I come to thy will, O God," and he went down the dark the soul for happiness in this world. How much power the soul has here to find enjoyment in friendships; but, oh, the grander friendships for the stairs of our sin and wretchedness and misery and woe, and he stopped the peril, and he died that you and soul is the skies! How sweet the flowers here, but how much sweeter they will be there! I do not think that when flowers die on earth they die forever. In the sunny valleys of are God's thoughts in stone; its de drops are God's thoughts in pearl. This world is God's child—a way-ward child, indeed. It has wandered off through the heavens. But about 1,900 years ago, one Christmas night, for G sent out a sister world to call that wanderer back, and it hung over Bethlehem only long enough to get the promise of the wanderer's return, and now that lost world, with soft feet of light, comes treading back through the heavens. The hills — how beautiful they billow up the how edge of the wave white with the foam of crocuses! How beautiful the rainbow, the arched bridge on which heaven and earth come and talk to each other in tears after the storm is over! How nimble the feet of the lamplighters that in a few minutes set all the dome of the night ablaze with brackets of fire! How bright the oar of the saffron cloud that rows across the deep sea of heaven! How beautiful the spring, with bridal blossoms in her hair! I wonder who it is that beats time on a June morning for the bird orchestra? How gently the harebell tolls its fragrance on the air! There may be grander worlds, swarthier worlds, larger worlds, than this, but I think that this is a most exquisite world, a mignonette on the bosom of im-mensity. "Oh," you say, "take my soul! Give me that world! I am willing to take it in exchange. I am ready now for the bargdin. It is so beautiful a world, so sweet a world, so grand a world!"

But let us look more minutely into the value of this world. You will not buy property unless you can get a good title to it. After you have looked at the property and found out that it suits you, you send an at-torney to the public office, and he examines the book of deeds and the ook of judgments and the book of liens, and he decides whether the title is good before you will have anything There might be a to do with it. splendid property, and in every way exactly suited to your want, but if cannot get a good title you will take it. Now, I am here to say not take it. that it is impossible to get a good title to this world. If I settle down upon it as a permanent possession, I may be driven away from it. Aye, in five minutes after I give up my soul for the world, I may have to part with the world, and what kind of a title do you call that? There is only one way in which I can hold an earthly possession, and that is through the senses All beautiful sights through the eye, but the eye may be blotted out; all captivating sounds through the ear, but my ear may be deafened; all lusciousness of fruits and viands through my taste, but my taste may be destroyed; all appreciation of culture and of art through my mind, but I may lose my mind. What a frail hold, then, I have upon any earthly possession! In courts of law, if you want to get a man off a property, you must serve upon him a writ of ejectment, giving him a certain time to vacate the premises, but when death comes to us and serves a writ of ejectment, does not give us one second of ewarning. He says: "Off of this tee! You have no right any longer forewarning. the possession." We might cry it, "I gave you a hundred thousand dollars for that property;" the plea would be of no avail. We might say, "We have a warrantee deed for that property;" the plea would be of no avail. We might say, "We have a lien on that storehouse;" that would do us no good. Death is blind, and he cannot see a seal and cannot read an indeature. So that, first and last, I want to tell you that when you propose that I give up my soul for
