EDITOR'S TALK

THE letters which come to the editor's table are numerous and interesting. Some of them tell him where he has gone wrong, some of them inform him how little he is aware of the real state of public feeling on certain questions, and a host of others are encouraging. All are educative and interesting. There is no better way to keep an editor on the proper path than to point out to him where he and his staff have deviated, have been obscure, or have failed to give proper attention to certain phases of public questions.

NO editor can always be in accord with the sentiment of all his readers. He collects about him a staff of men and women with various views of life and he tries to have all these writers work together on a common policy. Occasionally, the wise editor and the wisest staff may err, because they are all humans. For this reason, they need the sympathy and support of their readers. They should be judged, however, by their general course of conduct, not by some chance phrase or some unimportant statement.

THE editor of the "Canadian Courier" is pleased that his correspondence is growing apace. He is glad that his readers think enough of the paper and the part which it may play in the national life, to write him occasional personal letters. The greater the correspondence, the better informed will be the editor.

DURING the past ten days, many Ontario subscribers have enclosed renewals for two years in advance. These have been accompanied by letters which are most encouraging. The "Courier" is not yet all the editor would like to see it, but the evidence is accumulating that Canada is anxious to accord generous support to a national weekly.
