Peter Paper will pick it up

Recycling project starts

Gary Cohen

When you've finished reading this article, don't throw the newspaper into a garbage can. By the end of this week when York's new recycling project begins, you'll be throwing away a valuable commodity.

Through the efforts of Gary Drenfeld, Operations Representative for Peter Paper Pick-up and CYSF Director (Internal) Loretta Popeil, York is going to undertake a joint-effort, test-crack at recycling the estimated three to five tons of newspaper which appears on campus each week.

Last year, waste disposal cost the university two million dollars. An estimated 10 per cent of this waste was in the form of re-usable newspaper. Involved in the cost of this maintenance is the transport and disposal of this litter.

PPPU is prepared to remove this waste from the campus at no cost to the university. For each ton of re-usable paper collected the CYSF will receive twenty dollars in revenue (a fee which will rise as PPPU begins to realize a profit from the project). CYSF is also authorized to hire a representative to oversee the disposal operations. All of this can be done with a minimum of administrative expense and at a clear profit to the CYSF.

Drenfeld reasons that, "recycling is good for the economy in general and for the state of natural resources in Canada." Based on PPPU estimates it takes 17 to 20 mature trees to produce one ton of paper. Last year, in North York alone, 2200 tons of paper was recycled. The saving works out to about 200 acres of Canadian forest resources.

The cost of energy to produce paper from recycled materials is also 30 per cent less than if one starts with raw materials.

The ultimate aim of the project, says Drenfeld, "is to create conservator attitudes among the student population while at the same time providing a healthier environment for students at York." With a shift in attitude, the litter which daily clutters Central Square will be regarded as "saveable as opposed to waste".

This test run will only involve the area around Central Square; five receptacles will be put in prominent places by Friday, bearing the message "Newspaper Only, York Recycling".

If all goes well, Drenfeld notes, "By fall we are hoping to recycle three to five tons of newspaper every week. If this test run works out we are hoping to get into fine paper recycling at York in the future. Receptacles could be set up on every floor and the paper could be deposited at the end of the day."

Ultimately, the success or failure of the plan rests with the York student body. Popeil, who has been working on the project for the past two months, has some reservations about whether her plan will ever reach fruition. Despite strong support from the CYSF and York administrators Popeil says, "My major fear is that students will not co-operate. We have to stress that this is a student dependent project. If it's going to work, the student body must participate."

Don't fowl up the recycling depots, by inserting geese.
