Sore Hands

One Night Cure for Red, Rough Hands, Itching Palms and Painful

Soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of CUTICURA SOAP. Dry, and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure and purest of smollients. Wear, dry, ing the night, old loose kid gloves, with the finger ends cut off and air holes cut in the palms. For red, rough, chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, with shapeless nails, and painful finger ends, this treatment is simply wonderful.

MILLIONS OF PEOPLE
Use Curicura Soap assisted by Cuticura Cintment for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings and irritations, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and pursery. Millions of Women use Curicura Soap in the form of baths for annoying inflammations, chafings, and excoriations, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers. No other medicated soap is to be compared with it for preserving purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of 1º toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in One Soar at One Price, the first skin and complexion soap, and the Best toilet and baby soap in the world.

Anecdotal.

A Yorkshire miller, noted for his A Yorkshire miller, noted for his keenness in financial matters, was once in a boet trying his best to get across the stream which drove his mill. The stream was flooded, and he was taken past the point at which he wanted to land, while further on misfortune again overtook him, to the extent that the ooat was upset. His wife, realizing the danger he was in, ran frantically along the side of the stream, crying for help in a pitiful voice, when, to her sheer amazement, she was suddenly brought to a standstill by her husband yelling out: "If I'm drowned, Molly, dunnot forget that flour's gone up two shillin'

a sack!" In the year 1871, when the Government of Monsieur Thiers was at Versailles, and before the National As-sembly had decided whether the new constitution of France was to be monarchical or republican, the late Comte de Paris visited the palace at Vertailles. Just as he was about to enter, M. Jules Simon met and recognized him. Bowing low, Monsieur Simon said with much gravity: "If we are a republic, count, you are in my house, and I shall be delighted to do the honors; but if we are a monarchy, then I am in your house, and cannot play the The Comte de Paris laughed and took Monsieur Simon's arm. "Ah, monsieur," he said, gaily, "let us go in together!"

A Philadelphian tells the story of a waiter at a restaurant in the Quaker City, who has lately announced that has begun to study French. "Do you find it necessary here?" asked the customer. "Not here, sir," said the waiter, "but I've been offered a steady job in Paris at one of the hotels if I can learn French." "But Paris is full of French waiters," said the gentleman. "I'm afraid you're being de-ceived." "Oh no, sir!" said the man, with much earnestness and absolute simplicity. "It's a perfectly straight thing. The proprietor of the hotel says the waiters he has can't understand French as we Philadelphians speak it, and that's what he wants me for, you see."

"Who," asks "The Candid Friend," does not recollect Lord Hardwicke, the Glossy Peer, immaculately tailored, riding an almost priceless horse in the Row of a morning, or walking down Piccadilly, his hat at an angle which defied the laws of gravity? Spontaneously witty, with that talent for repartee which is as rare as it is de lightful, Lord Hardwicke was the best of good company, and one of the unforgettable social leaders of London in the last quarter of the nineteenth century. No one will have forgotten his ous answer to a well-known tailor who had been asked to stay in the house of a noble patron, and com-plained to Lord Hardwicke that the 'company was mixed.' 'Good Lord, man, you didn't expect to find 'em all tailors?

The late Joseph Cook was celebrated for his positiveness, which those who did not admire him termed "cocksureness." The Boston "Pilot" relates several stories in illustration of this. It says that when he went over to Scotland to demonstrate by practical experiment the dangerous effects of alcohol on the human brain, he beat up the white of an egg with spirits until the mass coagulated, but it did not convince his audience as he had expected. On the contrary, it only evoked from Professor Blackie the quiet re-mark: "That seems to prove that whiskey must be good for softening of the brain." But the cruelest sarcasm said of him was when Bill Nye demurely wrote: "I understand that my friend the Rev. Joseph Cook has completed a thoughtful essay entitled 'A Bird's Eye View of the Kingdom of Hea-

In the early Indiana days, when both judges and attorneys literally "rode the circuit," a newly elected judge, noted for his lack of personal beauty, was plodding along on horseback between two county-seats one fine summer day. Suddenly he was confronted by a hunter, who unslung his squirrel-rifle from his shoulder, and ordered the horseman to dismount. Somewhat startled by this peremptory command, the jurist began to remonstrate. He was quickly cut short, however, by the remark: "It's no use talking. I long ago swore that er met a homelier man than I am, shoot him on sight." The judge, small up the situation, promptly got off his horse. Folding his arms, he faced his assailant, and said: "If I am any homelier than you are, for heaven's sake do shoot, and be quick Needless to say, his wit saved him.

Her Revenge.

This amusing story is told by the president of a New Bedford bank, and is repeated in a Boston paper. One day not long ago he and other officers and directors were engaged in a business meeting, held in the directors' room of the bank, and as they believed themselves secure from intrusion, were much surprised to see a poor little walf enter the room, something which a man of business affairs would not dare to do under such conditions. The little girl, shabbily clothed and pinched looking, had all unconsciously entered on forbidden ground, but this she didn't realize, and at once went to the men seated about the big table, offering them small cakes of soap for sale. The very first director whom she approached shook his head, impatient at the interruption of business, and said sharply, "I never use it." The tiny peddler, unabashed, went from man to man, all the others, out of pity for her wan little figure, buying of her. As she started to leave the room, after thank-ing each purchaser, the girl hesitated a moment in front of the director who lever used soap, according to his own declaration, and, looking him over from head to foot, said, disdainfully, yer look it!" and then she swept out like a duchess.

The Cause of Dyspeptic Pains

They arise from the formation of gas owing to improper digestion. A very prompt and efficient remedy is Polson's Nerviline. It relieves the distention instantly, and by its stimulating action on the stomach, aids digestion. Nerviline cures dyspeptic pains by removing the cause. Nervil-ine is also highly recommended for cramps, colic, summer complaint and inflammation. Sold in large 25c. bottles everywhere.

WOMEN WHO WEAR WELL. It is astonishing how great a change few years of married life will make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliance vanish like the bloom from a peach that is rudely handled. The matron is only a dim shadew, a faint echo of the charming maiden. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few young women appreciate the shock to the 'system through the change which comes with marriage. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant drains which are often consequent on marriage and motherhood, not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its fairness. As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate womanly organs are established in health the face and form at once witness to the fact in renewed comliness. Half a million women and more have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

As indicating the crowded condition of the theatrical profession, it is said that in Paris alone there are not fewer than 300 actresses of average merit who are without engagements.

Permanent Muscular Strength.

There is this to be borne in mind in these days when so many young men are giving so much attention to mus-cualr development, in gymnastic and athletic exercises, that there cannot be permanent muscular strength where there is not blood strength. Portraits of Shelley.

Dr. Garnett has an article in The Magazine of Art for September which should be of great interest to all students of Shelley. It deals with the portraits of the poet which have recently been added to the National Portrait Gallery. The following passage deals with the portrait by Miss Curran:—Curran had been an intimate friend of Godwin, Mary Shelley's father, who had given Shelley an introduction to him on the occasion of the former's expedition to Ireland in 1812; but the Irishman's boisterous convi-viality seems to have disgusted the sensitive young poet. The Shelleys appear to have been for some time unpear to have been for some time unaware of Miss Curran's residence at Rome, but after its discovery through a chance recognition on April 23, 1819, she became their frequent companion.
The portrait was begun on May 7, and shortly afterwards Miss Curran is found painting Mary and little William.
Personal intercourse was abruptly terminated by the death of the child on June 7; the heart-broken parents left
Rome immediately, and never met Miss Rome immediately, and never met Miss Curran again. Letters were neverthe-less interchanged respecting a monu-ment which she designed for William Shelley, and a copy of Guido's "Bea-trice Cenci" which she undertook to make to be engraved as a frontispiece to Shelley's troppedy. The execution to Shelley's tragedy. The execution of both projects seems to have been prevented by want of means. All the portraits meanwhile remained in Miss Curran's possession until after Shelley's ran's possession until after Shelley's death, when Mary applied for them. Miss Curran, however, had gone to Paris, and the Shelley portrait was packed up at Rome. Even when she returned, it was no easy matter to get it safely conveyed to England. There seems to have been some idea that it might be brought by the young poet Thomas Lovell Beddoes, who had proved his enthusiasm for Shelley by aiding to guarantee the cost of publishing the Posthumous Poems. But Beddoes got no nearer to Rome than Florence and his stay there was of the ence, and his stay, there was of the briefest. "If," he writes to Procter from Milan, June 8, 1824, "I could be from Milan, June 8, 1824, "I could be of any use in bringing the portrait it would be a proud task, but most likely I only flash over Florence; entering on the flood of the stars and departing with their ebb." At length, on April 19, 1825, Miss Curran writes to Mrs. Shelley: "I waited to write to you until I could say that at last I had found an opportunity of sending the picture you are so anxious about. . It is enclosed in a small case of pictures to Edgell Wyatt-Edgell, Esq., care of Messrs. Calron, wine merchants, St. Mary's Hill, Fenchurch street, London. If the duty on pictures has not been taken off, as we hear, you not been taken off, as we hear, you will have to pay it. The picture has to be delivered expenses paid; it is the best I could do to forward it to you."
This was assuredly a reasonable condition, as the picture was still Miss Curran's property. It was ultimately received on September 17, 1825. Prely received on September 17, 1825. Preserved with religious care during the lives of Mary Shelley, her son Sir Percy, and her daughter-in-law, it became the property of the National Portrait Gallery upon the death of Lady Shelley in 1898.

In a London letter of a recent date the following interesting paragraph appeared:—'One of the things which has been remarked this season is the quite surprising number of ladies who have been going in for trade, that means making a livelihood. Napoleon Bona-parte said the English were a nation of shopkeepers, but he would have been even more surprised to-day had he known the number of patrician ladies who are not ashamed to strike out a line for themselves in order to be indedent of their various relations. How many people know that the ladies skirt-makers in Sloane square are really all women of excellent birth position, and they are doing a rattling good business, too. Their blouses are quite famous, and they have had so many orders to execute during the last season that they are quite unable to cope with all the orders that are show-ered upon them. This, by the way, is not on account of their birth and posinot on account of their birth and posi-tion, but because the work turned out by them is excellent. Miss Cockerell, too, whose engagement has been an-nounced to Captain Noel of the 17th Lancers, and the son of Lady Augusta Noel, has made quite a name for her-self by the beauty of design and the workmanship of the lovely neck chains she has made. Half the 'smart set' in London used to go to Athert Half Man-London used to go to Atbert Half Man-sions, South Kensington, with commis-sions for her. I have seen a great deal of her charming artistic handlwork. Everything is most beautiful. She has a delightful way of bleading jewels together. Some of her necklaces and chains of uncut stones are really superb. Miss Cockerell obtained very perb. Miss Cockerell obtained very large sums of money for her artistic chains. Many of those one sees in London came from her atelier. Many of the first-class tea-rooms of London, which are commanding the best trade, are also run by ladies of quality."

The Arab and France.

To Izzet Bey, surnamed "The Arab," is ascribed the aggressive attitude of the Sultan toward France. Izzet is regarded in diplomatic circles as the evil genius of the Sultan, and although nominally his secretary, he is in real-ity not only his chief adviser, but like-wise his chief executive officer. The Sultan recently conferred upon him the title of "Transmitter of the Verbal Commands of His Imperial Majesty, the Sultan." Small in stature and frail in appearance, Izzet, who was a subor-dinate police official when he first at-tracted the attention of the Sultan in connection with the discovery of a conspiracy, possesses a constitution that can only be described as of steel wire. He is simply indefatigable, is rarely known to eat or sleep, and has so thoroughly impressed everybody at the Yildiz Kiosk with the conviction that he is able to do without food or rest, that they look upon him as possessed of supernatural powers and as something akin to an evil spirit. He is with Ab-dul Hamid night and day, and no soondul Hamid night and day, and ho sooner does he leave the Imperial presence than he is summoned back. His cleverness is best shown by the fact that for eight years he has known how to maintain his position as chief favorite of the Sultan, bringing about the disgrace and in many cases the death of every statesman or dignitary who either stood to be very way or whose influence with the statesman or dignitary who either stood in his way or whose influence with the Sultan he had occasion to apprehend.

Izzet is responsible for most of the foreign policy of the Sublime Porte during the past decade, and to him belongs the credit of having taught the Sultan to make good use of the unreality of the so-called concert of Europe. ity of the so-called concert of Europe. He is especially averse to the French, being like all Arabs, of a revengeful disposition, and neither forgiving nor forgetting the fact that in 1890 he was dismissed from the subordinate police office which he then held on the demand of the French Embassy, on the ground of cruelty and corruption at the expense of French subjects. He is the most dreaded man in the entire Turkish Empire, of which he may justly be described as the Vice-Regent.
