Lady Marjorie's Love

Her surprise, though so openly displayed, was nothing to the girls. Marjorie gazed back at the beautiful unknown face in sheet amazement. "I—I beg your pardon!" she said blankly, stammering.

"Nay, I should beg yours." Recovering herself, the other withdrew a little. "Pray excuse me!" she said, with a faint smile. "I was so much surprised at seeing you there, close by, when I thought myself alone, that I spoke your name without thinking. She hesitated. "I am, I trust, not trespassing here?"

"Certainly not!" Marjorie answered promptly. "She too recovered herself and spoke in her coolest, prettiest voice, as she was so much surprised at seeing you there, close by, when I thought myself alone, that I spoke your name without thinking. She hesitated. "I am, I trust, not trespassing here?"

"Certainly not!" Marjorie answered promptly. "She too recovered herself and spoke in her coolest, prettiest voice, as she was so much surprised at seeing you there, close by, when I thought myself alone, that I spoke your name without thinking. She hesitated. "I am, I trust, not trespassing here?"

What To Do When Tired

By RUTH CAMERON

WHEN you had yourself suddenly getting very tired long before the end of your day's journey, what do you generally do?

Do you simply endure it as best you can, dragging yourself wearily through the heat and burden of the day until nightfall gives you the right to crawl into bed, too weary to sleep?

Or do you take yourself in hand and do what you can to make yourself more fit?

When I begin to find that logy, tired, life-is-a-burden feeling creeping over me, the first thing I do is to open all the windows and air out. I leave them open for a few minutes, going into another room, if necessary. Before I close them I take a few simple deep-breathing exercises.

Try this the next time and see if it doesn't help.

Of course, if you can go out for a brief walk, that's better still. Walk five or ten minutes and then go in and talk to some cheerful neighbor a few minutes more. That will rest your mind, and you will find that mind rest communicates itself to the body. If you can't go out, try lying down and either relaxing or reading some amusing book, no matter if you can't spare more than ten minutes. Every little helps a lot at times like these.

Ask yourself about the state of your stomach. It may be that you are hungry. Hunger and weariness are twin sisters, and sometimes we don't know them apart. Again and again when I find myself growing tired and cross I discover that hunger is the real trouble, and that some hot milk will put me on my feet at once. Remember that hot foods are always more restful than cold.

On the other hand, your stomach may be overloaded. There is nothing makes one feel more logy and sleepy than to have an overloaded alimentary canal. Weariness, the scientists tell us, is simply a kind of poison in the blood, and the alimentary canal steadily pours the most powerful poison into the blood when it is overloaded.

Again, your excessive weariness may be the sign of a cold—or infection as the doctors nowadays prefer to call it—and it may not be too late to forestall it.

Loosening one's clothes if one is in the habit of wearing tight things is always very restful. If you have been walking a good deal and your feet are very tired, take off your shoes and put on some slippers.

Sometimes soul rest as well as mind rest can be translated into body rest. I have a friend who always lies down and listens to one or two of her favorite pieces on her phonograph when she feels herself getting too tired. Myself I have often found some help in looking up at a certain very restful picture which hangs on my living room wall.

But whatever you do, do something. Don't just submit to the torture of traveling the long day's road with the horrible shackles of utter weariness fastened to your feet.
