

OVER THE ALL CANADIAN ROUTE.

And Fourteen Months From Edmonton to Dawson.

The Government Sets Them a Herculean Task but They Pull Through at Last—Want no More Similar Trips.

Mr. Charles Tobin arrived in Dawson Tuesday, after a fearful trip over the All-Canadian route via Edmonton. Mr. Tobin came through with Inspector Moody, of the N. W. M. P., over the all-land route projected for them by the government and were just 14 months making the trip. At Selkirk Mr. Moody turned south to make a personal report at Ottawa, while Mr. Tobin came on to Dawson.

The trip, as may be expected from the length of time consumed and the route traversed, was one of fearful perils and hardships. Men of the party fell sick or turned back until our adventurers were nearly alone. Hudson Bay company posts were found along the route laid out for them, but invariably the stores were found depleted and sometimes even deserted. At last Lake Teslin was reached and a boat built, and with the aid of provisions picked up in odd lots here and there the wearied travellers at last reached Selkirk a month ago and were frozen in.

It is a trip which even the most adventurous would not care to duplicate and sufficiently perilous to satisfy the most Western appetite. Time and time again they were on the verge of starvation and but for game or fish might have left their bones back in those untracked and untraversed wildernesses.

Mr. Tobin is a young man, of good physique, and good health and probably in the end will not find himself much injured by the hardships he has undergone. Coming down from Selkirk he froze his nose and face, but does not regard it as serious. He is a stepson of Mr. A. Powers, Queen's council of the Ottawa bar.

A WEEK'S POLICE ITEMS.

A slack week. Mostly common drunks.

C. Holgard "d and d," $25 and costs.

Vic Richardson, full and funny, $25 and costs, and now sits at the head of the table.

W. McKinney willingly contributed $25 and costs and now sits at the head of the table.

Dan McCrae combined too much Scotch with his already Scotch physique and was scotched, $25 and costs.

W. P. Suttons prefers hazardous chances to "mushing" a sled. For $50 and costs he will be allowed his choice.

J. M. Turgson had the temerity to assault Jas. Janson, a man twice as big as himself. $10 and costs makes the whole world kin.

J. O. O'Mellar is ambidextrous, digitally expert, a master of Boyle, and so contributes $50 and costs to the public funds.

Miss Carrie Boyle is not amiss excepting when she boils over. Too much liquid refreshment brings with it a headache, and a fine of $5 and costs.

Ed Davis got the "mittens" in fact a few of them and they belonged to some one else. Consequently, one month where the mittens are locked up over night.

R. Harold was inebriated and couldn't whisper—in fact was decidedly emotional and incoherent. The doctor prescribed and Harold took his dose. $5 and costs.

C. B. Brown plays with a slight percentage in his favor. The law took a hand, played a "sure thing" and Brown is $50 and costs poorer, but well assured that it don't pay to buck the other fellow's game.

W. Sutton is a "better" and now a wiser man through $50 and costs poorer. The vagrancy act eaters' "bitters" so having subscribed to the provisions Sutton now sits at the head of the table, absolved of all iniquity.

Isaac Lewis committed a sad indiscretion. A man that will "swipe" a tent with the thermometer 40 below deserves a month in the care of the striped-legged boys who live in log houses. So thought the justice. The man acted ill-advisedly, he should have taken nothing less than a two-story frame.

B. Fuller dislikes to have his sleep disturbed by the everlasting uproar of Klondike's beasts of burden. J. P. Douglas has a dog—his father had a dog much given to nocturnal pre-arrangements and lunar serenades. The result of the coming together of these opposing elements was an angry man rudely wrenched from the arms of Morpheus, and salving forth from his domicile on dishabille, but armed with a gun. This gun went off. Fuller says he fired in the air, but one thing is quite sure, the bullet and the dog met, formed a close and abiding friendship, and Fuller paid $25 into court next morning. One hundred went as a salve to the wounded feelings of the bereaved Mr. Douglas, and twenty-five to soothe the ruffled majesty of the law.

Svendsgaard's Anglo-American Hospital.

Although Dawson has a number of public hospitals where the sick and injured may be cared for, their relief is general to a certain extent. There has long been felt the necessity of a private hospital in the hands of capable, experienced and efficient management, where in the more retired care of such place of treatment the ill may be returned to convalescence. That this might be accomplished the Svendsgaard Anglo-American hospital has been opened to the public, and is now prepared to receive patients. The large and commodious building located near the corner of Eighth street and Fifth avenue has been secured, and fitted up in the most substantial and careful manner, everything that would be conducive to the care of those requiring careful nursing, helpful attendance and skillful surgical and medical care.

The first floor contains the reception room, dining room, bath room, three private rooms, offices, kitchen and operating room, the second floor having a large ward room, but only for a limited number of patients, a consideration worthy of note by the public.

Each room is comfortably heated, and each bed furnished with the best of box mattresses, the very best that money could buy, and equal to those obtainable anywhere in the states.

A corps of trained nurses, schooled in the training schools and hospitals of the old and new worlds, will be constantly in attendance, and nearly all know that one of the most essential aids to convalescence through the skill of the physician is careful nursing.

The culinary department has been specially provided for and looks after, as one of the most important things in all hospitals is the proper preparation and quality of food provided the patients, all foods being thoroughly inspected by the house physicians.

The medical department is under the direct personal attention of Doctors Catto and Cassel, many years experience. Patients, however, are not confined to any particular physician, the choice of such being left entirely to the patients themselves. It will always be, in the future, as in the past, natural for people to be sick and to receive injuries. It is a pleasure to know, however, that in this far away country, distant from friends, should sickness come to any one, they can have all the care and comforts of a home, clean, tidy rooms, good beds, clean sheets, good bedding, the best of nursing and medical care. The business management and superintendency of the Anglo-American hospital is in the hands of a thorough practical gentleman, thoroughly experienced in drugs, medical and hospital work, enjoying a high reputation in the largest cities of the United States and the most prominent hospitals of the country. This gentleman is Mr. Svendsgaard, and application for admission to his Anglo-American hospital may be made at Svendsgaard's drug store on First Avenue, near the corner of Second street, or at the hospital.

An Accomplished Artist.
Probably in no walk of life in the world, professionally or otherwise, is the climbing of the ladder reaching to the bulwarks of success so difficult of attainment, obstructed with more obstacles, and beset with more trials than is that of successful accomplishment on the stage. Regardless of what may be the education of the would-be artist, there must be that personal magnetism and power of reaching the human heart, whether it be in the line of humor or of pathos. In most instances where woman has reached fame in her particular line, personal charms, personal graces—nature's gift of form and figure—have aided largely to such success, and called forth the admiration of the worshipping at the shrine of those who have wooed and won fame and fortune upon the stage.

There is in Dawson today an artist in her particular line, who has, by her own efforts and faithful adherence to her profession reached a niche in the wall of fortune sufficient to gratify the most ardent ambition. Comely in figure, pleasing in form, accomplished in education, artistic in her roles, form the ground-work or alphabet of her chosen work, built successes reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, filling engagements in the leading theaters of the country for weeks and months at a time. We refer to Miss Cad Wilson, who, before coming to Dawson, filled a three-months' contract at the famous "Orpheum" of San Francisco, noted for its selection of talent, and this little lady pleased thousands nightly, during that protracted and unusually lengthy engagement.

When a person on the stage catches the heart and sentiment of their audience, that particular line, desired most, and it is to see their satisfaction and Miss Wilson possesses that faculty to a remarkable degree of keeping in close touch with those before her. She possesses a most extensive repertoire and probably one of the most elaborate wardrobes to be seen on any stage, while her diamonds and jewelry are the envy of the fair sex. There are thousands of people in Dawson who would delight in seeing Miss Wilson in some of her legitimate work, and we trust an early opportunity will be afforded for gratifying this desire. None are more ready to volunteer their services in the aid of worthy objects and of charity. Her roles are almost inexhaustible, but in her legitimate work she most excels, and it is to see some of these the public is quietly expressing a hope, to which the charming little actress is most willing to respond and gratify.
