TO TEST ROME'S SINCERITY.

Briand Concedes Points and Pulls Over Stiff-Necked Premier. Paris, Feb. 4.—The view of Minister i Education Briand that the Govof Education Briand that the Government must continue along Liberal lines in the execution of separation laws seems to have pulled over the stiff-necked view held by Premier Clemenceau, and it has been practically decided to instruct the prefects that the contracts of the leasing of churches offered by the parish priest are acceptable, with modifications, provided they do not violate the rights of the state which exist under the present laws to "disaffect" the churches. In other words, the Government wants to test the sincerity of the desire expressed by Rome to find a basis of settlement.

Hundreds of Canadians have visited the city during the past few winters, attracted by the salubrious health-giving climate, and the attractive social life of the Jamaican capital. Senator Beith.

Senator Beith.

Mr. Robert Beith, M.P., of Bowmanville, who has just been called to the Senate, has long been one of the leaders in the stock-raising industry of this Province. He was born on May 17th, 1843, in Durham county. Early in life he acquired an extensive knowledge of farming and became deeply interested in stock breeding and stock raising. He principally devoted his talents along this line to the importing and breeding of thoroughbred horses, until his name has attained a national reputation. But Robert Beith's brain was not always thinking of his stock farms. Interested in public affairs, a Liberal of pronounced opinions, and possessing the confidence of the members of that party in his native county, he was elected to the House of Commons in 1891 for West Durham. Again in 1896, and in the bye-election of 1901, he successfully contested the constituency. During his tenure of office as a member of the House of Commons he has been of immense benefit to the interests of Canadian farmers and stock raisers. SENATOR BEITH.

Robert Leslie, a young Scotchman who came to Canada some time ago, smiled as he said this leaning against the wall of a corridor that leads into the immigration offices at the Union Station, says The Globe. He looked out from under his somewhat faded cap and carelessly scuffed the floor with his foot, as though he had in his mind a picture of the pretty spot seven miles from Edinburgh where he expects the holly will be hanging from the centre of a room to greet him.

The Elder-Dempster is a direct mail line, which covers the 5,000 miles distance in about twelve days. The island lies directly in the route of steamers between the isthmus and all the United States Atlantic ports.

Illustrious Fame Roll of the Mother Country As Exemplified In

Country As Exemplified In

Many Men of Note.

Sir Robert Peel—"Bob, you dog, if you're not Prime Minister I'll disinherit you," These words were once jocularly uttered by the father of this eminent English statesman, who was anxious from the first that his heir should make a figure in politics. How Sir Robert, step by step, won his way to the Premiership twenty-three years later cannot be told here. Suffice it to say that England has never possessed a statesman with greater talents for legislative business and finance. Personally Sir Robert was not a popular or sociable man, but he loved his work and the House of Commons, and the country is indebted to him for many reforms and much prosperity.

The world admires a successful man, and more so when that man uses his gifts and prosperity to confer benefits upon his fellow-creatures. Sir Titus Salt built up the greatest manufactory of alpaca fabrics in Europe, and he also built around that manufactory a village of 900 employes. A man of thoroughly altruistic principles, Sir Titus treated his hands with great liberality, while he gave princely gifts to Bradford, which town he represented in Parliament and served as mayor.

William Cobbett.

William Cobbett.

William Cobbett.

The sturdiness and indomitable energy of Cobbett must arouse the admiration of every Englishman. From the son of a peasant he rose to be one of the most daring and powerful political writers of the early half of the nineteenth century. It is true that Cobbett had a capacity for getting himself into "hot water," but this did not deter him from fighting for any cause he considered to be right. Cobbett loved the poor as much as he loved the country and the fields, and he undoubtedly did much by his trenchant writings—which called the attention of reformers to work which required to be done—towards ameliorating the conditions of those who lived in the poverty corners of England.

Dr. Tait, Archbishop of Canterbury.
Undoubtedly the greatest achievement of this prelate-was performed when he succeeded Dr. Bloomfield as Bishop of London. So vigorously did Dr. Tait labor in the metropolis that in a few years he raised no less than £350,000 for the building of churches, schools, and parsonages in the poorer districts of London. His sermons and writings in their day were read with avidity, for people recognized that they emanated from a mastermind. Dr. Tait had many difficulties to overcome, but he grappled with to overcome, but he grappled with them in a manner which proved him to be thoroughly equal to the duties of the high offices conferred upon him.

Lord Melbourne.

Although this noted statesman never earned fame as a great orator and brilliant politician, he accomplished some solid and valuable work for the country, more especially when he became Prime Minister. He signalized his accession to his office, in 1835, by carrying a great measure of municipations. his accession to his office, in 1835, by carrying a great measure of municipal reform, and the following year came the lowering of the stamp duty on newspapers and the Tithe Commutation Act, benefiting landowners and clergy alike. One of the most notable and estimable features of Lord Melbourne's career, by the by, was the delicate tact and friendly and concientious care with which he initiated Queen Victoria into the duties of Sovereign on her accession to the throne.

Lord Dufferin.

This great Ambassador had one of the most distinguished careers among the most distinguished men of his time. Among the letters which he was entitled to write after his name were P.C., K.P., G.C.B., G.C.S.I., G.C.M. G., G.C.I.E., D.C.L., LL.D., F.R.S. The LL.D., was conferred on him by Oxford, Edinburgh and Harvard, while he was also Doctor of Oriental Learning of the Punjab University. His Lordship acted as Governor-General of Canada as well as of India and was Ambassador to Russia, Italy and France, while early in his career he filled various Under Secretaryships of State. Once, in a moment of facetiousness, he described himself as "Maid-of-all-work to British Governments."

William Charles Macready.

The efforts of this great actor were purifying the drama. He undoubtedly did much good service for the English stage, and brought about many reforms. But Macready did more Rheumatism. Because they wont take Bu-Ju. Now, isn't it a fact that there are a lot of people in your neighborhood who say "Bu-Ju completely cured me of Rheumatism."

Sir George White.

It is fitty-three years since Sir George White entered the army, and he served soon after in the Indian Mutiny with the 27th Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, winning a medal and clasp, while during the engagement at Charasiah he won the Victoria Cross. He took part in the great march from Kabul to Kandahar, and was at one time military secretary to the Viceroy of India. For his distinguished services in the field he was promoted to be major-general, and that by the Government of India, in which country he served as Commander-in-Chief Sir George White. Charles Lever.

Charles Lever.

Apart from his powers as a writer, Lever was one of the most brilliant conversationalists who ever lived, and the life and soul of any company. He was at home everywhere, knowing everybody, and a welcome guest in all societies and in all countries. And no less welcome were his books. Who has not laughed over his amusing stories of Irish life, and the adventures of "Charles O'Malley," "Arthur O'Leary," "Tom Burke of Ours," and "Jack Hinton"? Lever has been accused of giving a false idea of Irish character and life. Be that as it may, the world of literature would have been much poorer without his rollicking and always entertaining stories.
