NED CAMERON'S LETTERS.

These thoughts passed swiftly through May's happy heart as she mused upon the contents of the min-

Her heart was too full to write much, but she could not keep him in suspense, when he had so longed for her forgiveness. So she wrote:

"Rev. Mr. Cameron: Your letter before me. I knew you would learn the truth at last. I thank God every hour for His goodness to me. All is forgiven.

Brief and unsatisfactory as this letter was, it was better than suspense, and the Rev. Mr. Cameron was content to wait until his health would permit his return to Riverbrook before he made perfect his explanation to May. Now that the cause of his low spirits was removed, his health began to improve, and he grew strong rapidly. He had written again to May, but this time the letter failed to reach her, and he waited in vain for an answer.

He had been three months at the South, when one day, after dinner, he was requested to go to a neighboring plantation to attend a dying man.

Supposing it to be a negro who wadying, he hastened to comply with the request, knowing well the comfort a few words of prayer affords the soul of one of that race.

Judge of his surprise, when he en tered the lonely hut, to meet the agonized face of Tim. The poor fel low recognized the face of his old friend, and exclaimed:

'Oh, Mr. Cameron! The very Lord had sent ye, sartin sure! I'se got ter die, 'specks. I don't want ter, but I'se afraid of pins an' needles stuck red-hot full o' me! Mrs. Belle said they'd do it ef I tole, an' I never tole nobody. But I can't die 'thout toleing somebody 'bout stealin' the Ned Cameron was surprised at the tone of Tim's partial confession. Having so recently received Goldie's letter, his mind at once reverted to it and he asked:

"Was it Goldie Mellen's child, Tim "Oh, Lordy! ye went ter worm

The young minister offered prayer n behalf of poor Tim, which greatly comforted him, and before nightfall Tim died quietly.

"ANYTHING IN REASON"

Can Be Cured with Douglas Egyptian Liniment

So thinks Mr. Nathaniel W. Reid, of Enterprise, Ont. Here are his grounds for thinking so: "Some time ago I was troubled with near the ear. I had consulted several physicians, and tried everything I could hear of, but obtained no beneficial results.

I was told to use Douglas' Egyptian Liniment, which I did and was permanently cured Since that time I have used this Liniment for everything where an outward application is required, and have yet to learn of anything in reason that I cannot cure with it. No man has any idea of its value until he has used it, and no one will be without it after once using."

Mr. Reid is exactly right. No amount of praise impresses one so favorably as
