Ladies' Costumes

Fall—1915—Styles.

Was there ever a more fickle lady than Dame Fashion? She is always making changes, and this season has surely surpassed herself.

There is a more decided change in this Fall's styles than has been known for many seasons. While materials are similar, Serges, Gabardines, Tweeds, Cord, etc., the designs are absolutely unlike any of their predecessors. Coats are of many styles, chiefly a la militaire, with high collars, snug-fitting sleeves, and the entire coat in some instances is beautifully braided. Skirts are much fuller, both pleated and gored, and are worn very short.

As descriptions are quite impossible, we can only say that we carry the largest and smartest line of Ladies' Costumes in the city.

Gas and Hospitality.

The sound of motor wheels heralding the arrival of unexpected guests has no terrors for the housewife whose methane is run on up-to-date lines. While the visitors are removing the traces of travel, with the hot water which a gas water-heater keeps always "on tap," a match to the gas fire makes the drawing room a place of warmth and pleasantness for their reception; and the children love to "help mother" by toasting the crumpets before the clear and smokeless glow.

The gas cooker (or the modern gas trivet by the drawing rooms gas fire) boils a kettle of water in no time, and within a quarter of an hour after their arrival the guests are enjoying a cosy chat over the cup that cheers. Should they be persuaded to stay, the invaluable cooker makes it possible, even at such short notice, for the experienced housewife, after a raid upon her emergency store cupboard, to set before them a dainty dinner of which no hostess need be ashamed. Gas means ever-ready hospitality.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

The princess coat, fur trimmed or braided bound, will be a favorite this winter. Bordeaux, that dark, wonderful old red, is as often seen in outer wraps as dresses. Where the bodice and skirt of the evening dress join there may be a line of tiny roses.

Charming little school hats may be made from old blue corduroy for the little girl. Sometimes velvet ball buttons and pockets are the only decoration of a full box coat. Tiny tortoise-shell ball buttons are a pretty finish to an other-wise severe costume.

CONDITION OF THE SERBIAN ARMY.

LONDON, Nov. 16.
The Daily Telegraph has the following from Rome: The condition of the main Serbian army is excellent. Marshal Putnik is personally directing operations; Prince Alexander commands the army of the north. Twenty thousand Austrian prisoners, five thousand Germans and four thousand Bulgarians have been sent to the Montenegro frontier. In its retreat, the main Serbian army has saved all the field and mountain artillery, heavy guns, locomotives and railway wagons, and thus sufficient munitions have been preserved for an offensive. According to information from Cetinje, the Serbian territory still free from the invader, comprises about 7,800 square miles; it is estimated that 200,000 troops and five hundred thousand fugitives have retreated into this region since the beginning of the war. The Serbians have lost 250,000 men, more than one-third of them from disease, and another 50,000 are still in Macedonia, and are unable to communicate with the principal army. Princess Helen has refused to go to Cetinje preferring to remain near her family as a Red Cross nurse.

SEEKING GUARANTEES.

LONDON, Nov. 16.
The Entente Powers are seeking guarantees from the Greek government, the Athens correspondent of the Mail explains, because they have decided to establish an entirely new front in the Balkans, entailing the presence of a large number of troops and desire something more definite than mere promises of benevolent neutrality.

MODIFIED ITS POSITION.

LONDON, Nov. 16.
The Greek Government is reported to have modified its position somewhat in favor of the Entente Allies. The correspondent at Athens of the Exchange Telegraph Company says it has decided that in event of the retreat of the Allies to Greek soil, Serbian troops will be placed on the same footing as the British and French.

HEAVY SICK LIST.

LONDON, Nov. 16.
The average daily losses in the Dardanelles for the entire period from May to October were 795, the Parliamentary Under Secretary for War told the House last evening. The great bulk of these men were the sick, who aggregated 90,000. Of these, he added, eighty per cent might be expected to return to the fighting ranks.

DEMONSTRATION OF WOMEN.

PARIS, Nov. 16.
According to the President of a big Swiss bank, just back from Germany, the peace agitation is beginning seriously to permeate the country. Huge demonstrations of women took place in Berlin, the banker says, riots ensued, and the police had to charge with drawn sabres. There were two hundred victims, all women. German censorship suppressed all reference to the disturbance.

NOTHING TO REPORT.

PARIS, Nov. 16.
There is nothing to add to the preceding communications, says the War Office report this afternoon.

IN THE COMMONS.

LONDON, Nov. 16.
Charles Trevelyan, Liberal member for York, in a speech on the formulation of terms of peace for the purpose of trying to obtain by negotiations, instead of by bloodshed, the restoration of the status quo ante bellum of European boundaries on lines of nationality. Germany, said Trevelyan, to preserve her existence, can continue the war for six years. In the meantime that is going to happen to us and the rest of the world? A war of attrition means as well for us as for Germany utter and irremediable ruin. Andrew Bonar Law condemned Trevelyan's speech as useless and mischievous. There is not another member of the House, said Law, who believed for a moment that Germany will free Belgium or restore Alsace to France, until she is thoroughly beaten, and the British Government is as determined now, as it was on the first day that war was forced on us, that we should continue until the objects sought by it are attained. T. P. O'Connor said the view should not be permitted to go abroad that Trevelyan represented any considerable section, either of the Parliament or the country. Until Germany was defeated, he added, it was certain that she would never consent to terms of peace satisfactory to the Allies. John Hodge, Laborite, said that during the last six months he had toured France for the purpose of counteracting the evil effects of such mischievous pacifist views as Trevelyan had expressed. As long as Kitchener, a man who accepts no advice remaining at the War Office, we will not win the war, declared Sir Arthur Markham in the Commons this evening in a debate on the conduct of the war. Kitchener, Sir Arthur added, was responsible for the blunders at Antwerp and the Dardanelles and also for the withholding of information from the public, whom he treated like derelict. Carson told the Commons that he left the Cabinet when it came to an emphatic decision on the advice of his military advisors, that it was too late to assist Serbia. He protested if it were too late to assist Serbia that country ought to be told, so that she could take such steps as would save her from destruction. It was not until Joffre came to England that the policy announced by Asquith was decided upon. The Prime Minister replied that there had never been any decision that England should not send troops in case of need, if military and political conditions demanded it. He declared that there has been any avoidable delay in making preparations to come to aid Serbia.

FISHER IN THE LORDS.

LONDON, Nov. 16.
"It is unfitting," said Admiral Lord Fisher, former First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, in the Lords this afternoon, "to make personal explanations affecting national interests, when the country is in the midst of a great war." Lord Fisher made this statement in reply to criticisms by Winston Churchill, who was First Sea Lord when the naval attack on the Dardanelles was made, in the Commons yesterday, following his retirement from the cabinet. Churchill in his speech complained that he had not received from the First Sea Lord in connection with the Dardanelles affair, the clear guidance before the event, or firm support after it to which he considered himself entitled.

STEAMER MISSING.

SYDNEY, N.S., Nov. 16.
The steamer Dunelm, which left Sydney on Oct. 16th with a cargo of steel products from the steel works here for Manchester, England, has not yet reported at any port in England or Ireland. It is feared she has met with disaster, either sunk by a submarine or foundering at sea.

TROUBLE ON CUNARD LINER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.
Passengers who arrived here on the Cunard Liner Saxonia to-day, gave further details of the strike of firemen on the liner, as a protest against permitting slackers to escape military service by leaving the country on their ship. The action of the firemen so aroused public indignation against the quitters that all the principal British steamship companies have since refused passage to any men of military age, unless they show sufficient cause for leaving the country. The Saxonia was due to sail at one o'clock on Saturday. As she had one hundred and eighty cabin passengers, 4,200 bags of mail, and five millions in specie, her commander, Captain Marshall, was anxious to get away on time. Long before noon the landing stage was thronged with more than seven hundred young men, clamoring to get aboard. About six hundred of them booked stowage accommodations and nearly two hundred made cabin reservations, so eager were they to get out of the country. Most of them were Irish, but a fairly large percentage of young English chaps were sprinkled in. When the firemen of the Saxonia saw the assembly they set up a howl of disgust. They said they were doing their "bit" for England, bringing the ship through the zone of the submarine peril, and that they did not intend to assist others to escape from their duty. They struck in a body, and reported to chief engineer Procter that if "slackers" went on board, they would quit. Recruiting sergeants argued with the men, but the "slackers," most of them with tickets already in their hands, appeared utterly apathetic. The sergeants promised them that the Cunard Company would return the amount advanced on their passage if they would only remain and enlist. White feathers were pinned on many by young women. The officials of the Cunard Company, after a hasty consultation, decided to debar any passengers of military age who could not show their legitimate reasons for leaving the country. Finally the ship got away with the firemen, but without the "slackers." The Saxonia reported a rough passage all the way across, with a succession of gales, and rain squalls.

ASQUITH HOPEFUL.

LONDON, Nov. 16.
Continuing his speech in the Commons, Premier Asquith said he was confident that the appeal to the sense of patriotic duty now being so energetically pressed by Lord Derby's committee, would elicit an adequate response from all classes, and especially the young unmarried men of the country. Asquith, to quiet the fears of the anti-conscriptionists, reiterated that no decision regarding compulsory conscription could be taken without the consent of Parliament.

Some of the new hats are curiously like the old-fashioned beavers of 1830 or 1840.

If you have an old velvet gown in the trunk, there are endless ways of making over and combining it with taffeta; and the result can be a very chic dress.

THE PRESIDENT.

By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

The President of the United States is a good and wise man, who is elected by the people to give tone to politics in Washington. He is popularly supposed to run the country, too, but he doesn't. He merely looks over the train sheets.

The President serves four years. Some of the most durable have served eight years. He gets $75,000 a year, and lives in the White House, a large mansion, completely surrounded by newspaper reporters. He doesn't get his salary for living in the White House, but it is said to be worth the money.

The President usually rises to his high office from obscurity, and goes back there promptly as soon as his term is over. Only native born Americans can be President. This discourages immigrants so that they rarely go into politics. They go into business instead, and become aldermen.

It is the duty of the President to veto all bills passed by the opposition, to see that the Cabinet chairs are freshly filled each morning, and to eat whatever is set before him, no matter how badly the banquet committee may have fallen down. He must fit a Pullman car berth neatly must enjoy seeing his features warped all out of shape by cartoonists, and must give reporters and writers any desired details about his way of shaving, or his brand of socks or the way in which he ties his socks.

The President is public property, and is never allowed to forget the fact. The public is very hard on Presidents too, just as it is on the rest of its property. Very few Presidents live very long after their escape.

The President works very hard and is worked even more heartlessly by former days, executives were very poor house-cleaners, but nowadays the President who didn't clean up at least a department of government a week would be accused of incredible carelessness. The chief exercises of Presidents are shaking hands with office seekers. They are of various denominations. Some are Episcopalians, some Presbyterians and one or two have been thirty-cent pieces. Candidates for the Presidency are chosen by influential politicians in a national yell. Marathon held every four years: The candidate getting the longest yell is nominated. It is customary to elect Republican Presidents.

The Presidents have all been noble honest men. They are even grander and nobler after death, for then even the opposition admits fit. If a President works hard and makes good, he gets into the hall of fame, and has 100,000 namesakes. Thus far, however, no namesakes has ever become President.
