The Nugents of Carriconna

An Irish Story, BY TIGHE HOPKINS, AUTHOR OF "TWIXT LOVE AND DUTY," "FOR FREE-DOM," ETO.

And work of it," said Aunt Barbara, as she carried Dora off upstairs, leaving Arthur to start Mr. Bucknall for his train, and to entertain Trenchard. "But tell me, how did you hear? You know I couldn't send to you, for I had no address, and even if I had one I don't think I would have brought you back, though you may guess how much I have missed you these dreadful days." "Dear Aunt Barbara" exclaimed Dore

"So you know nothing about the money,

"So you know nothing about the money,
Aunt Barbara?"

"Nothing in the world, dear. It seems to me that nobody knows; Mr. Bucknall—that's the solicitor—doesn's know; and the bankers know nothing except about the small balance with them; and Arthur knows no more than the rest."

"Nobody has explored the tower, then,
Aunt Barbara?"

"The tower, Dora?—no; what has the tower to do with it? I declare I haven't borne to think of that terrible tower since
the night of the storm."

"I shall show you what is in the tower, aunt Barbara," said Dora. "Oh, how glad I am that I came."

"But tell me, dear; tell me at once," pleaded Barbara. "And then I want to know about yourself. Dear, dear, the mystery and the trouble we've had these days. And I not knowing what to think of poor dear Anthony leaving us in such a plight as this."

"Aunt Barbara," said Dora, "the tower is full of money, full of it. I found it accidentally, at least almost accidentally, for I never knew what I was looking for.
There is an underground room in the tower, and I don't know how much money stowed away there in bags. I did not dare to tell whilst Uncle Anthony lived, for I thought from what the newspapers said that poor Uncle Anthony had most likely died without telling anybody."

"Hid in the tower—a room full of gold—
I declare I don't know what to make of it,"
said Barbara, hopeless surmise written on her features.

Then trning the conversation, as if for relief, she went on the tower store.

"Hid in the tower—a room full of gold—I declare I don't know what to make of it," said Barbara, hopeless surmise written on her features.

Then trning the conversation, as if for relief, she went on to tell Dora in detail the short sad tale of Anthony's accident, sliness and death; of the wretched anxiety with which she had waited while the ruins were being searched; of the carrying in of Anthony, of the doctor's coming, of the long delirium, then of the death and the funeral.

"And how sorely I wanted you thank to dark think you wear enough of the funeral."

me that."
Dora smiled.
"And I am going to send you back to finish it, depend upon that," added Barbara. "Oh, but this money, this money—and you have really seen it down there, down in the tower? I never heard of any underground place in it at all."
"You shall see it to morrow, Aunt Barbara."

"I snew you would come as soon as you had work of it," said Aunt Barbara, as she carried Dora off upstairs, leaving Arthur to start Mr. Bucknall for his train, and to entertain Trenchard. "But tell me, how did you hear? You know I couldn's send to you, for I had no address, and even if I had one I don't think I would have brought you back, though you may guess how much I have missed you these dreadful days."

"Dear Aunt Barbara" exclaimed Dora, "I wish I had been with you."

The name Dora gave her fell strangely upon Barbara's ears.

"Does she know it then?" thought Barbara Bora was much the taller of the pair—and looked her in the face.

"I am your aunt," said she, "and you known that?"

As her aunt said this, however, it was Dora's turn for astonishment.

"Why how long have you known it this said.

"Only just now," answered Miss Nugent, smiling.

"But how?" said Dors, more bewildered than ever. "I thought it had been my secret only."

"Your uncle must have known it this from your father's solicitors in Australia; twas from that I learned it. Anthony talked about it which he was delifious; about that and the money; he talked about me and the money; he talked about it when he was delificus; about that and the money; he talked the money is a complete of the money.

"Hid the money is queried Barbara in the turn.

"I ain't goin' to send any more money out to the heathen," said Willie. "I seen a picture of one of 'em this mornin', an', as far as I could see, he didn't wear any pants, and so hasn't any pockets to carry the money in."

"Ah, I came here in a bad spirit. I was envious and angry because my father had deserted me and left everything away from me. I.—"

"Well, dear," said her aunt soothingly, "I can't wonder that you took it to hear?, and I can't approve of your father treating you so. For I cannot think that you did anything bad enough to deserve it."

"I married against my father's will," answered Dora. "I know now that his wishes were the right ones, but I had my punishment."

Tam still using it, and, with God's blessing, 1hope to be entirely cured.

ELIZABETH ANN KITCHEN, Paris, Ont.

Mrs. Kitchen refers us to the Rev. Alfred Brown, Episcopal minister in Paris. Rev. Mr. Erown says:

"Thereby certify that Mrs. E. A. Kitchen, of this town, is well known to me, and that every statement of hers is worthy of credency."

Can imagination pictures darker scene of suffering so long endured? What torments! What agonies suffered from day to day!

The dark clouds have passed away; the silver lining appears; and now in its bright splendor the effulgent sun shines out, and Mrs. Kitchen's life is no longer shrouded in darkness and misery. That life-giving remedy, Paine's Celery Compound has been her physician and salvation, and has accomplished more than all the skilled doctors this lady ever employed.

Women of Canada, we tknow that many of you are suffering as severely as Mrs. Kitchen once did. Thousands of you are experiencing some of her symptoms, which if not attended to and speedily dispelled, will certainly lead to consequences as terrible as those described in the above letter.

Let us remind you that these troubles arise from an imperfect and disorganized condition of the nervous system. When the nervous system is deranged the whole body is out of gear. Your weaknesses and frailties are well known to us, no matter how silently you may suffer. Those head-aches, neuralgic pains, feelings of goneness, nervousness, despondency, tired brain, weak, flabby muscles, sunken eyes with dark circles, and palid cheeks, all tell of some ills and miseries. Paine's Celery Compound, used when any of the above symptoms are experienced, will certainly drive off all danger. Among the members of your sex it has proved a blessing; and Canadian women in all sections of our country have testified willingly in its favor.

Take warning before life is in actual danger. A week's delay may aggravate and complicate your malady, and hasten your death. Act to-day, and act wisely.
