OF CITY OF TANGIER

"We were on the lookout for this man, and we spotted him pretty quickly. I gave orders not to search him, and not to have his clothes taken away from him, but to put him in with the others and keep the closest watch on him that was ever kept on a man. We knew from his coming in that his brother must be here in the city, and he'd send a message to him the first chance he got."

oming in the city, and he'd send a message to him the first chance he got."

"But Jonas, how could he ""

"Easily enough. He comes down to the prison to sell things to the prisoners with other negroes. We let him pass in, watching him as we watch them all. He fools around a while, until he gets a chance to brush against this man Dumont. My men are keeping that fellow under close observation, and they saw a piece of paper pass between them. By my orders they gave no sign. We want to catch the man to whom he is to deliver the paper. He has the paper on him now."

"I will never believe it."

at the back of the house. He can't get away; he will have to give it up."

"And the man he gives it to will be the man you want?" said Mrs. Varney.

"Yes, but I can't wait long. If that nigger sees my men or hears a sound he will destredy it before we can jump in on him. I want the man, but I want the paper, too. Excuse me." He stepped to back window. "Corporal!" he said softly. The long porch window was open on account of the balmy air of the night, and a soldier, tattered and dusty, instantly appeared and saluted. "How are things now?" asked Arreisford.

The Corporal nodded and turned to—ward turned to—ward the hall door.

"Wait," said Mrs. Varney. "I still doubt your story, but I am glad to help. Why don't you keep your men out of sight here and let me send for him here,

Arrelsford thought a moment,
"That may be the better plan," he admitted. "Get him in here, and, while you are talking to him, they can seize him from behind. He won't be able to thing. Do you hear, Corporal?

"Yes, sir."

"Keep your men out of sight; get them back there in the hall, and while we're making aim talk, send a man down each side and pin him. Hold him stiff. He mustn't destroy any paper he's got."

The Corporal raised his hand in salute and left the rom. The men disappeared from the windows, and the back porch looked as empty as before. The whole discussion and the movements of the men had been practically noiseless.

"Now, Mr. Arrelsford, are you ready?"
