A FEW OMINOUS SIGNS.

Why are the Russians Stocking Their Fortresses With Provisions, etc.?

New York, Nov. 14.—A despatch to the Herald from Odessa says:—The extraordinary large purchases of grain, hay and other army provisions now being made here, as well as in Podolia and in the district of Kieff by a number of military intendents are attracting the attention of German and Austrian correspondents. It is said this is only a timely provision against the exigencies of a long and severe winter. At the same time, however, the fact remains that the Russian army now going into winter quarters on the front, and near the military lines of the western frontier, is sufficiently powerful to meet any untoward political event which might necessitate its instant mobilization either during winter or in early spring. Russia has, however, no intention, so long as the present political situation endures, of in any degree depleting her western garrison. In this there is no actual cause for alarm or for the pessimism of the Austrian and Hungarian press. Russia's present attitude is distinctly a waiting attitude, and for some considerable time it will unquestionably remain the same unless some unforeseen rupture should occur.

Drowning of Mr. Pyne, M. P., Near Dublin.

Dublin, November 14.—A saloon passenger named Pyne fell overboard on Tuesday night from one of the steamers running between Holyhead and Dublin and was drowned. It is reported that the man was Jasper Douglas Pyne, member of Parliament for West Waterford. It is certain that Jasper Douglas Pyne embarked at Holyhead yesterday evening for Dublin. He has not been seen in this city since the steamer's arrival, and there seems to be no reason to doubt that it was he who fell overboard during the steamer's passage.

LABBY'S LONDON LETTER.

SPECIALLY TELEGRAPHED TO THE LONDON "FREE PRESS."

The American Girl "Pad" Over the Water-Labouchere's Suggestion—The Commission and the "Times" case—His Views on the Whitechapel Murderer, etc.

London, Nov. 14.—Henry Labouchere telegraphs:—Several newspapers have taken advantage of Mr. Chamberlain's marriage to call attention to the English girls in the matrimonial market, and have suggested many causes for this. I should say that the main reason is that the American girl is not so "misery" as her English sister, and that she is brought up to run down her own game.

Not a girl will be so easily seduced as a girl is sure to get into mischief if she has not a mother or something of that sort at her elbow. She herself resents this and takes it out in fast conversation and slanging ways so that she becomes a singular mixture of the doll and the tomboy. Her small talk is of the very smallest small talk. Her mother is always with her with public suggestions of marriage, which frighten off all suitors.

The girl dresses badly, generally, and in meretricious gaud. She does not give her natural advantages a fair chance. At one moment she appears in hideous garments of the ashtray pattern; at another time she displays herself in a mannish costume with a tennis racket in her hand, while at another hour of the day she is to be seen in white and limp muslin innocence. There is always an air of effort in her getting up, and of effort which is a failure.

Now, the American girl has a natural taste for clothes. They seem to belong to her, and whatever she may wear is put on to best advantage. She knows how to talk agreeably, and, being always quite at ease, puts all those with whom she is thrown at ease. The day of the bread and butter tomboy is over. The English girl must realize this if they want to get married.

There is still one further reason why the American girl is preferred in America. A man who has sons and daughters makes no financial difference between them. In England, even when a man is not so silly as to pile everything on his eldest son, he gives his sons more than to his daughters. The result is that the more American girls with money than English girls; and outside novels, it is a fact that the girl who can pay her own way takes the lead in the matrimonial market.

If I had four daughters and four sons, I should, if I were rich, divide my money equally between them on my death, and if I were poor, I should leave more money to the girls than to the boys; for a boy, if he be not a fool, can make money and produce money, whereas a girl rarely can.

To meet the American invasion, therefore, I would suggest that our girls take the American girls as models, and that parents should not in future give any financial preference to their brothers over them.

It is time to speak out. Far be it from me to express opinions which are subjective, but I am one of those who created the forgeries commission and I do not hesitate to say that lamentable error of time and money is being caused by the commissioners and by their misunderstanding for what purpose the commission was brought into existence. Day after day being consumed by the advocates of the Times in parading every agrarian outrage which has taken place and every speech which has been made by the Nationalists during the last ten years. What the country, which is paying this Commission, and what the House of Commons, that created the Commission, want to know is, whether the Times has any evidence in which to found a charge that members of Parliament have been privy to outrages, and whether the letters already by the Times to have been written by Mr. Parnell and Mr. Egan are genuine or forgeries. All else is mere waste of time.

It is unprofitable work theorizing about the Whitechapel murders, but while everybody is offering suggestions to the police there is one consideration which should not be lost sight of, and that is, as to the possibility, in my opinion almost the probability, that the man makes the acquaintance of his victims long before he commits the crime. He does this by means of the women they might entertain, and waits for or possibly arranges with the women themselves the opportunity for the crime. There are one or two circumstances about the last butchery which strongly suggest this conclusion. So there were about the Mitre Square case. I should not be surprised to learn that in each of those cases the murderer was well known to the women before the crime was committed, and that, in the Mitre Square case, the murderer was waiting for his victim by appointment on the spot where she was butchered. What I would therefore press on the police is that they should direct their attention less to mysterious individuals, who frighten girls in dark corners, than the habitual and consequently trusted associates of the women of this class.

Emperor William has been far from well during the last three weeks, and the doctors advise rest of the mind and of the body, both of which have been incessantly on the rack for nearly a year past. The Emperor has been suffering from neuralgia, headache, and there has been a return of the paralytic attack in the left ear. The Emperor is having a private railroad carriage, 50 feet in length, built for his own use, at a cost of $35,000. It contains a dining-room, a study, bed-room, dressing-room and bath. The Comte and Countess of Paris leave next month for Lisbon, whence they proceed to their estate in Spain for a residence of several months.

WARREN VS. MATTHEWS.

WHY THE LONDON CHIEF OF POLICE RESIGNED.

The True Inwardness of the Unpleasantness—Chief Warren and Able Man—The Latest Regarding the Murder.

London, Nov. 14.—What is called Sir Charles Warren's resignation is practically his dismissal. When once the Home Secretary had been allowed to lecture the Chief of Police in the House of Commons for publishing an article in Murray's Magazine, his stay in office became impossible. It has been for some time a question whether Sir Charles or Mr. Matthews should go. There has been friction ever since the Trafalgar Square riots last winter. Then came disputes respecting the detective service and the resignation of Mr. Monroe, the head detective, followed by his transfer to the Home Office.

Mr. Matthews has behaved badly throughout, and least popular Home Secretary since Spencer Walpole. Finally the difference between him and Sir Charles Warren became a cabinet question, and the Cabinet, as usual, preferred to sacrifice somebody else rather than a colleague. It only shows once more what weak things a strong Government can do.

The desire for Mr. Matthews' retirement is genuine and well founded. The Opposition to the Chief of Police sprang from no other cause than his doing his duty and doing that thoroughly well. Complaint of him, because he was a soldier, was an empty complaint. Serious attacks on him date from Trafalgar Square.

He knew his own mind about his business. Mr. Matthews did not know his. Sir Charles was determined to keep order. Mr. Matthews was for order one day and disorder the next. Perhaps there was a moment the Chief of Police forced the hand of the Home Secretary. At any rate he completely defeated the agitators whose howl of baffled rage is now turned into a yell of delight over his fall. They have never ceased to pursue him. There are not many things in the history of the Radical press more disgraceful than this campaign against Sir Charles Warren. It was a campaign of calumny, others joined in it, notably such statesmen as Mr. Conyngham, Mr. Graham and Professor Stuart and fell. The lowest types of irresponsible fanatics.

When the Whitechapel murders occurred Sir Charles was held responsible for the failure to discover the murderer. These papers stuck at nothing and they have triumphed. The Cabinet, consequently, have the pleasure of reflecting that Mr. Conyngham has proved himself stronger than Lord Salisbury. All the Anarchists, Socialists and agitators of every grade and criminals of every class rejoice that their enemy is overthrown, and that it is they who have overthrown him. He never would have been allowed to resign but for outside agitation.

The much have learned the lesson. They have only to rail against their oppressor long enough and out he must go. Sir Charles did his duty admirably and London owes him an immense debt. His successor, whoever he may be known, that if he does equally well he may expect the same fate. There is a fairly good prospect that the police of London will have to adjust itself to the wishes of the lowest class.

No new facts of importance came out at the inquest on the latest victim of the Whitechapel murderer. If the police have any evidence they keep it back. Experts say nothing has done more to prevent the arrest of the murderer than excessive publicity. Every clerk, or supposed clerk, has been discussed in print, with the result that the criminal knew what to expect. But as he probably does not read the papers, I may say the police are confident that the man who committed the murders. They have an exact description of him, and are searching for him night and day, but have lost his trail entirely. They are confident, however, that he cannot ultimately escape.

AN ALABAMA ALTERCATION.

Wherein Bowles Enjoins Were Used—The Principals Dead—A Terrible Story.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 14.—Some time ago Dr. Robert Nubors, of Montgomery, Ala., employed V. Shortridge, a V. Shortridge, a lawyer, to collect claims against delinquent patients. The returns were not satisfactory and the men quarrelled. They finally agreed to meet at the doctor's office. Removing their coats and shoes the men entered the room and fought for some time. Without saying a word he rushed down the stairs, still claspings a gory knife in his hand. Lying upon the floor was Shortridge, his head had been smashed in a fearful manner. The arteries of his neck had been severed, one eye had been gouged out and his hands were cut so terribly that the fingers hung only by the tendons. The man was dead. Nubors after leaving the office ran out upon the street. He seemed to be crazed with pain, and staggered wildly along the street until he reached a store, where Albert Keenan (colored) stood in the door-way. Without saying a word Nubors rushed at Keenan and struck at him with the knife. The negro finally dealt him a terrible blow upon the head, and leaping over his body ran into the street and disappeared. Nubors never regained consciousness. Both bodies were buried yesterday, the funerals being largely attended.

LIVES LOST IN THE GALE.

Several Steamers Foundered in the German Ocean—Great Loss of Life Feared.

London, Nov. 14.—A severe gale has prevailed on the western coast. The steamer Galeta arrived at Plymouth Monday night and reported that when Monday started Point and the Eddystone Lighthouse saw about midnight distress rockets fired from a steamer. She got within hailing distance and was informed that the steamer was in a sinking condition; that the boats were smashed and the crew in need of assistance. The fearful state of the weather prevented the Galeta from launching her boats, but she remained by all night and until twenty minutes to six a.m., when a heavy squall struck both vessels, and on the weather clearing the steamer had sank. The Galeta cruised about for three hours, but could see nothing but wreckage, nor is the name of the steamer known.

The brig Granite was driven ashore yesterday morning between Seaton Carew and the mouth of the Tees. The Seaton's lifeboat went out to rescue the crew, but could not closely approach the vessel before she broke up. All on board were drowned, seven in number. Next to a youth, who was picked up in an exhausted state.

A lady who was watching the wreck from the beach became so agitated that she suddenly died.

The schooner Isabella, from Sunderland, for Banff, was wrecked at Stonehaven. The crew were saved by means of ropes thrown from the shore.

Two sailors, who arrived in Schull Monday night, reported that their vessel, bound from Liverpool, struck on the Alderbank Rock, Crookhaven, Sunday night during the gale and became a total wreck. Four of the crew were washed overboard and drowned. The Captain and two sailors were the only survivors.

The British steamer Black Watch foundered on Nov. 12, in lat. 36° N., long. 19° E. The fate of her crew is unknown. The Black Watch, which was an iron screw steamer of 936 tons, sailed Oct. 20 from Naples for Odessa, and was probably returning from Odessa when she foundered.

HANGED BY THE NECK.

An Old Sinner Executed for the Murder of His Grandchildren.

Lebanon, Pa., Nov. 14.—Wm. Showers, aged 65, was hanged today for the murder of his two grandchildren at Annville, May 17, 1887. He made no statement on the gallows, and showed great composure throughout. Death resulted from strangulation. Showers' body will be taken to Annville by his two sons, to whom he left a letter giving full instructions, while they were in bed and threw the bodies into a drain. Showers had made efforts to have the children placed in an orphan's home, but failed, and his desire to get rid of them ended in murder.

Thirty Miners Killed by an Explosion.

Brussels, Nov. 14.—An explosion of fire-damp has occurred in the Frederick pit, at Dour, in the Province of Hainaut. Thirty miners were killed.

Later despatches say 32 persons were killed at the time of the explosion. There were 35 men in the pit and only three escaped alive. The three survivors were all injured.

Their Accusers Did Not Appear.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 13.—The Royal Commission to inquire into the charges against Grenway and Martin has ended in a fizzle. Luxton and Burrows, the editors who made the charges, failed to appear, and Judge Kilham said he should report the charges not proven. The editors refused to go on with the charges, unless the scope of enquiry was extended, and this the Government refused to do.
