The St. Thomas and London curling clubs played a match on Friday last for the Malahide medal, the gift of senator Leonard. London won by 72 to 84.

The New York Herald referring to Vignaux's big runs at billiards says: "To those who watch his play the wonder is not that he makes such big runs, but that he ever stops except from sheer exacustion."

Irishmen as Athletes.
Referring to the classification of the carsmen a gensleman remarks in the Turf, Field and Farm on the sumper of Irish names among them. He says:—

"Among the distinctively Celtic names in the first class' are Hanlam Conley, Kennedy and Courtn-y. Ross is a Scotch cognomen; Gaudaur a French, and Michael Rush of Australia is evidently a human shamrock, for Ireland is a great place for rushes of all kinds.
"In the second class we find such Irish appellations as Molnerney, Riley, Drigogil, Jaggan and (it). "In the second class we find such Irish appellations as MoInerney, Riley, Driscoll, Largan and Gibson; the English rowers Power, Kirby, Sullivan, Lynch, Quian, Day, Murray, Hearb the Australian, and perhaps one or two others are also Ceitic.

"In the third class are Nagle, Ward, Gallanagh, Moore, Orifin, Dearman, McCarthy, Dempsey and Fleming. The names spelt 'McDonald' would seem to be of Scotch erigin, but it seems doubtful to me is seen as spelt properly, for, although the Scotch ought to make fine carsmen on account of their broad, deep chests and great brachial strength, yet comparatively few of them take to rowing.

"Two recent champious of England, Boyd and Elliot, would seem by their names to have emigrated directly or indirectly from the land of the shamrock.

"McDonald is a discinctly Scottish way of malling."

Elliot, would seem by their names to have emigrated directly or indirectly from the land of cakes as Kelly, Higgins and Seller did from the land of the shamrock.

"McDonaid is a distinctly Scottish way of spelling the name known it. Iroand as McDonnell, and as some of the latt." were always famous in Irish histery for their strength, I am indined so think that one of the published list ought to have his name wristen in that manner. This is merely a supposition, however, and is not mentioned as a fact."

"How is it but the Irish are so prominent in the rowing world, and in other athletic exercises?"

"It is an easy matter to abcount for that. In the first place the Irish are the biggest men in Burope, by including height, breadth and depth of cases, and size of fimbus uncer the word big."

"How do you prove that?"

"Esaily enough. Each army in Europe has a cortain standard of height and width of chest for recruits, and if they do not come up to this they are refused. The birth-place and full particulars of the physical condition of every recruit is carefully preserved, and by averaging the dimensions of a large number, the psysical status of the males in each province, district or country is readily proved. These statistics are published from time to time, and from them we learn that Pat is the biggest man in Europe. The statistics of the Union army during the last war also proved. I was ordered out of every shop I went into before I could sell a thing. Oh, years and for the last eight years no one can tell the pains I have endured. At tim is I had a dull, heavy headache, discharge falling into the throat of a blick remacions nucus. My eyes were weak and watery, indige in the errs, deadness, hacking and coughing to clear the throat, and at times I was almost softeated. I consulted some of the best physicians of the day, but to no effect. I have tried every kind if patent medicines, washes and snuffs, that I could

Note by the Publisher.—The Publisher of the Statesman has had an intimate acquaintance with Mr Oke for about thirty years, and e.n. with soorss of others, vouch for the convectness of the above statement. We have never known so bad a case of Catarrh as Mr. Oke's was, and the use of Digor's Catarrh Remedy has effected a perfect cure, so that no symptoms whatever of the disease remain. We gladly give space to Mr. Oke's letter in the hope that it may be of benefit to some victim of Catarrh. Messrs. A. H. Dixon & Son will send a treatise on Catarrh free on receipt of stamp.
