FRIDAY MORNING, AUG. 1, 1884."

It would be better for Mr. Lenihan if the Globe, the Mail, and the Irish Canadian did not discuss his case from a politico eligious point of view. After reading all the articles of the above-named esteemed Mr. Lenihan was at one time connected with a brewery in Lindsay. Subsequently he removed to Toronto and started a grocery. While conducting that establishment (he says) Mr. Blake called upon him and asked him to go to British Columbia as ner. The Irish Canadian states that Mr. Lenihan went thither as the representative of the reform catholics in the east, and as the guardian of twenty thousand catholic Indians in the Pacific province. Mr. Lenihan claims that he did "completed") the work that Mr. Edgar was sent to do, and which this country paid the latter six thousand dollars government did him wrong in not sustaining him when he arrived at the point to which he was despatched by Mr. Blake: also that the present government discharged him without proper superannua-tion. He says in effect, "a plague upon both your houses." Now the Globe, the Mail and the Irish Canadian have seized upon Mr. Lenihan's case to point a politico-religious moral. What The World would like to find out is why Mr. Edgar should be paid six thousand dollars for work which Mr. Lenihan had to "complete?" Also why Mr. Edgar should be favored with a nomination in-West Ontanie, to the prejudice of local men, after failing to "complete" the job for which he was paid six thousand dol-

Every sporting event that takes place at Toronto is followed by more or less grambling on the part of the outside participants. Oarsmen, bicyclists, baseball players, lacrossists—even uniformed drill societies—all complain that they do not get fair play in Toronto. Making all due allowance for the natural tendency of the defeated to explain their lack of success by attributing partiality to the unpire or referee, it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that there muss be some ground for complaint. There is but one remedy. If Toronto sports and games are got up entirely for the aggrandizement of Toronto people always manage, by fair means or foult to retain in that city the prizes offered for general competition, it will probably dawn upon the "provincial" competitors that the proper thing to do is to allow Toronto people, alone, to compete for the prizes, In connection with all manly sports quarrelling and grumbling should be avoided, and if this cannot be done by competitors who visit Toronto they should stay away.—Hamilton Spectator.

The "competitors" who "stay away" are is said in the rural districts about Toronto:

The "competitors" who "stay away" are always protected from Toronto competition. They are also safe from Toronto corruption. The "Nautilus" rowers are aware of this fact even if the Spectator "land lubber" is not.

The judgment and the imagination of the professor seem to be utterly under the influence of his admiration for Principal Dawson: Montreal is ever so much a greater city than she really is because Dr. Dawson lives there, and McGill univer.ity is among other in stitutions of learning on the face of the earth as the sun is among the stars of heaven, because Dr. Dawson is principal of it. We are not discounting Dr. Dawson, which have our heartlest best wishes; but we are mentioning Professor Selwyn's bias and enthusiasm that his statements may be the less mischievous. For example what could be the motive, where is the excuse, for this sentence occurring at page 597: "The citizens of Toronto are not admirers of their French brethren in the province of Que."

The content of the professor seem to be under the influence of his admiration of the admirations of the advantages of the advantages of the scheme, and for some time their theological constitutions of the advantages of the French brethren in the province of One.

bec, and are perhaps somewhat inclined to provincialism." This aspersion is inexcusable, and the question is, should the government permit a man holding a place so high in the public service to make such a statement? The man's position stamps his utterance with authority; and we notice that "The Statesman's year book for 1884" reproduces a number of Profescontemporaries upon the subject, we have sor Selwyn's mischievons inaccuracies. arrived at the following digest of facts: After page 624 there is a plate of University college, and on page 624 is this sentence: "The accompanying sketch of University college, Toronto is illus trative of the style of the building and size of an Ontario university." Elsewhere the Ontario "universities" are enumerated as those of Toronto, Kingston, London, Ottawa and Cobourg; so that Torontouniversity is "illustrative of the style of building and site" of our universities at London, Cobourg and Ottawa! In the Year Book, which is condensed largely from Prof. Selwyn's work, we find that in Ontario "the common schools are supported partly by government and partly by local self-imposed taxation, and occasionally by the payment of a small fee for each scholar."

a statement which conveys an inaccurate and mischievous impression. But listen to this, "For higher education there are several universities or colleges, the chief of which is McGill university, Montreal, with which several of the other institutions are affiliated." It will here be seen how the lustre of Dr. Dawson gets away with Professor Selwyn's imagination. McGill then "affiliated" with "several other institutions." It is affiliated with just two, on of these is about three years old and has exactly one professor; the other is largely, if pot almost entirely manned by Toronto niversity men. "Under the management of Principal Dawson, LL.D., C.M.G., F.R.S.," Professor Selwyn tells us "McGill has developed facilities training, and has maintained so high a standard for graduation that it sheds a lustre on the educational system of Canada.

Already the several denominational colleges are crystallizing around it" [notice several again, Ed.]; "and it is attracting to Montreal the scientific associations of the neighboring republic and of the leading nations of Europe." His great journey from Zanzibar to the mouth of the Congo was the longest and the most hazardous journey that has yet been made through the dark continent. It was also the most important to science, since Stanley not only surveyed and mapped the two great lakes, Victoria and Tanganyika, but he also settled the question of the alleged outlet of Tanganyika and traced the whole unexplored course of the Congo, thus establishing its identity with the Lualaba. No previous nor subsequent African explorer can compare with Stanley in the extent and value of his geographical discoveries. But, not content with his work as an explorer, Stanley has since built roads and established trading stations along the Congo, and thus made the vast interior of the continent accessible. This part of his work will prove to be of incalculable value, and it gives him rank among the greatest philanthropists of the age. His great journey from Zanzibar to the
