It is further sound protectionist policy occutide from the chain all weak and defective links which could only work injury to those other links that were naturally strong. And, by the way, we feel well warrakned in recalling the fact that the injudicious agitation speedily died out after The World's "sottler" on the subject.

How nice all this appears to be, and how designable, to be sure? But let us glearly understand that protection does not interfere with any exchanges between arrious gones which are really rendered necessary or destrable through difference of bons did a natural conditions. Raw cotten from Georgia has as free entry into Canada under protection, as it has into the Massachisetts, in the country in which it is grown, or into England. But when it comes that, although cotton will not grow in this sorthern country as it does in Georgia, yts spinning and weaving machinery will run in Moutreed or Corawall just as well as in Providence or Fall River. Most emphatically protection does got stand in this way of free explanges of natural products between different stance. Excess of praise is hardly possible when speaking of the new and superbly beautiful design, which is intended to me the demand for a more expensive exterior or cabinet, togeth with a most superbaction. This organ is of most substant and pleasing proportions, and of a style of finish suitable any situation. In pleasing balance of proportions, practicutility of form, richness of ornamentation and delicacy finish, this instrument will not only compare favorably w the best but surpass all organs of any make; while for streng and purity of tone, variety of expression and freedom of acti it is far in advance of anything yet produced.
