The New Testament was outlined as furnishing the greatest life stories ever published and well worth study as books of recreational reading.

Rev. A. I. Brown, of Alvinston, in speaking on some pros and cone in social and literary department work, laid before the Leaguers the opportunities of this department to magnify its office and to utilize its sphere of influence in developing the members of the Leagues. Each of us is only the result of what we have done or seen, or what we have said, therefore it is the duty and privilege of this section of the Society to bring forward the importance of books and of reading and of thinking. and co-operation are words that always spell success.

The reports of last year's executive officers were called for and presented, showing very faithful work indeed throughout the year. These reports showed a marked degree of progress in drawing the Leagues into closer co-operation, and taken altogether, they gave a very optimistic toue to the year's work. Following this the Business Committee was elected, the results being as follows.—

by Rev. H. J. Fair, of Arkona, and after the opening exercises the roll call of leagues was proceeded with, after which Rev. A. E. Jones, of Strathroy, gave an address on Citizenship, the latest department to be added to Epworth League activity. He first drew from the delegates the various fields of work coming under this department, and then enlarging upon these outlined yery clearly the large opportunities for service that are open to members of this part of the local leagues, patriotism, municipal politics, leagues, patriotism, municipal politics, temperance, moral reform and athletics. temperance, moral reform and athletics. The life and ideals of Jesus Christ should so permeate all Christian lands as to make a war such as is now going on in Europe to be impossible. Proceeding, the speaker said:—"It is surely foreign to the thought of any Epworth Leaguer that any man should sell his vote." A young man should look forward to the time when he shall attain his majority and be able to place on record his views and aspirations regarding the political life of the community or of the nation.
"I hope the day is past when a young "If hope the day is past when a young man will vote Conservative or Reform because his father or his grandfather voted that way."
