ship, (born in the parish of Carsonbie, Dumfriesshire), and finally removed to Lansdowne in 1862. God blessed them with a large family of sons and daughters. The eldest son is M.P.P., for Leeds Co., and William is M.P.P., for Parry Sound. Dr. Eliz. R. Beatty is a most successful medical missionary to Icdia. From the effects of the climate upon her health, she was forced to retire a few years ago from the work she loved—and is now practising her profession in Brantford, Ont. In 1870, Mr. Beatty was ordained an elder in the church which he has done so much to build up. He took an active interest in all local affairs—was first President of the Agricultural Society, for many years President of the Bible Society, and ever faithful and devoted in the discharge of all his duties as an elder in the church. In 1893, Mrs. Beatty died, and since then his health gradually declined, until at last he entered into his rest—an old man and full of years—having reached the advanced age of ninety one years. "His children arise up and call him blessed."

A MOTIVE

is quite often understood as an advance guard for action, and is invariably regarded as the twin sister to premeditated intention, thus, in a greater or lesser degree, influencing or giving shade or color to what other wise perchance may be void of interest to the subject affected. It is also that which induces choice of volition, and furnishes its occasion or reason. As consequences are generally dependent upon motives, it is highly important and essential that the motive be pure and good. Impure motives are formed and acted upon to no small degree in nearly every social and business department of life, thus indicating the necessity of standing true to principle and obeying the voice of conscience when the occasion arises where a choice is required. Among the various lines of business there are none that indicate the motive more clearly than does life insurance. The mere fact of a man's having taken the necessary step of making provision for his dependents in the case of his death, through the medium of life insurance, is, generally speaking, positive proof of the motive involved.

The Compound Investment Plan of the North American Life Assurance Company has many advantages and liberal features, combining, as it does, protection to the family in the event of the death of its head, or a desirable investment to the holder should he survive the investment period selected.

Full particulars of the attractive investment plans of the Company, and copies of its last annual report, showing its unexcelled financial position, furnished on application to Wm. McCabe, Managing Director, Toronto, or to any of the Company's agents.

A MATTER OF JUSTICE.

Is the Way a Young Lady of New Brunswick Views it.

Suffered From Headaches Pain in the Side and Heart Palpitation - She Thinks Similar Sufferers should Know
How She Found a Cure.

From the Fredericton Gleaner.

Miss Alma Miller, of Upper Southampton, N.B., is a daughter of Mr. Ezra Miller, a wealthy and influential farmer, and the young lady is a general favorite among a wide circle of acquaintances, who have had occasion to congratulate her upon her complete restoration to health, after a severe and trying illness. When a correspondent of the Gleaner called upon her, and requested that the facts might be given for publication, the young lady, though not at all anxious for publicity, nevertheless gave her consent in the hope that her experience might prove beneficial to some of the many young girls whose condition of health is very similar to what hers was previous to her cure. Miss Miller stated that when her illness began her mother was unable to look after the affairs of the household and the duties largely devolved upon her. She felt herself growing weak and easily tired, but felt that she must keep up. She says: "Notwithstanding my efforts I found myself growing worse and worse. My appetite failed, my complexion became sallow and my eyes sunken in my head. I was troubled with dizziness, shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart until at times I felt as though I would suffocate. I was almost constantly troubled with a pain in the side, and severe headaches. When I went upstairs I was obliged to rest. Life had become almost a burden and at last I was forced to give up and keep my bed. My friends feared I was going into consumption and one remedy after another was tried with no beneficial results until I was induced to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. In less than three weeks I was able to leave my bed and go about the house, and the use of the Pink Pills a few weeks longer completely restored my health and strength and drove away all symptoms and pains which had made my life so miserable. I feel that in bringing this matter before the public I am but doing simple justice to suffering humanity, and I hope that those afflicted as I was will give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. I might also add that other members of our family have used Pink Pills with equally good results."

What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for Miss Miller, they will do for thousands of other young girls throughout the country whose condition is similar. They restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks, correct functional derangements, and create a feeling of new life and energy. The genuine Pink Pills are sold only in boxes, the wrapper around which bears the full trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." Refuse all pink colored imitations and other medicines said to be "just as good."

A FIREMANS FALL.

An incident that happened in a large cotton fire in the lower part of New York, some years ago, had its comic side, and was the means of the firemen discovering the main body of the fire, which for some time they had been endeavouring in vain to locate.

The smoke was pouring out of nearly every part of the building; and although several entrances had been made, it had been impossible to find the seat of the fire. The chief in charge ordered some windows on the third floor to be "opened up," and a ladder was accordingly raised, and a fireman ascended. With the aid of a hook he pried open the iron shutters, and, lamp in hand, stepped in—and disappeared! His companion upon the ladder, wondering why he had so suddenly vanished from sight, peered in, and found that he had stepped into the elevator shaft that was directly under this window, and had fallen through to the basement. Hastily descending, he alarmed the others, and forcing an entrance, they made their way to the cellar. Here they found their comrade in a sitting position upon a bale of cotton, partly stunned and dazed from the shock of the fall, but otherwise uninjured. In his hand he still held the wire handle of his lamp,—all that remained of it, while in front of him, further in the basement, blazing merrily, was the fire they had been endeavouring to find. His fall had led him directly to it. On afterward examining the hatchway, or shaft, through which he had fallen, they found that it had bars running diagonally across at each floor, and in some marvellous way he had escaped each one in his downward flight.—Perils of a Fireman's Life, by Charles T. Hill, in the June St. Nicholas.

THEY WILL SING IN THE SOUTH

What a desolate land it must be where there are no birds! Quite as desolate as a land without flowers. In South Africa, where a number of English families have settled, there were no birds, and the people grew homesick for them. They missed not only their songs, but the life they gave the woods. What do you think they did? They sent to England for the birds they loved—the lark, the thrush, the nightingale, the robin, the starlings, and many of the other home birds, and they have now reached Africa. There is a park owned by an Englishman near Cape Town, and there these birds are to make their home. It is expected that they will be so well cared for that they will build nests, and lay eggs, and bring up their children in this new home, and make the English people there happy.
