"I am very glad to meet the 96th again. We have both been a good deal about the world since we were last together, and I am very glad to hear such a good account of the regiment. Your colonel tells me that you are not only in good health, but that you are good in conduct—that you have very few men in hospital. Now, this is all right, and I hope you will continue to bear a good character. But let me give you a bit of advice—that is, don't drink. I know young men do not think much about advice from old men. They put their towns in this day and think have a good deal better towns in this day and think have a good deal better towns in the figure of the figu tongue in their cheek, and think they know a good deal better than the old cove that is giving them advice. But let me tell you, that you are come to a country where, if you drink, you're dead men. If you be sober and steady, you'll get on well, but if you drink you're done for; you will be either invalided or die. I know too regiments in this country—one drank, the other didn't drink. The one that didn't drink is one of the finest regiments, and has got on as well as any regiment in existence. The one that did drink has been all but destroyed. For any regiment for which I have a respect, and there is not one of the Bitish regiments whom I don't respect, I should always try and persuade them to keep from drinking. I know there are some men who will drink but such men will soon be in hospital, and very few that go in, in this country, ever come out again, I wish the 96th Regiment every success, and I am very glad to see it in the state it is."

After a grant of the state it is."

Chase Extraordinary.— A legal process having been issued against a gentleman of this city, who has witnessed nearly 60 summers, was delivered to a person to effect service accordingly. As the party had been for some time playing at "hide and seek," it required a little generalship to find out his whereabouts; this, however, was ascertained one evening this week, and a reconnoitring party, armed with the process, was stationed near the house all night. About five o'clock the next morning, the defendant was observed emerging cautiously from morning, the defendant was observed emerging cautiously from his retreat, with an arch smile on his face, and a cloak on his acm; but, having espied the party in waiting advancing, he smelt a rat, and hastily depositing the cloak over the rails into the area, made a precipitate flight towards Hampton, by the canal. No respite, however, was here allowed, and onward they pushed to Farnboro', both by this time exhibiting signs of distress. The old man was not to be done, and after rasting a few moments upon a stile on the side of the road, where again the tones of the functionary were soon.

A. N. McNab. (Signed) INSTRUCTIONS TO THE COMMISSIONERS UNDER THE REBELLION LOSSES BILL.

(Copy.) SECRETARY'S OFFICE,

Montreal, June 28th, 1349. Gentlemen,—By the Act of 12 Victoria, chap. 58, passed during the last session of the Provincial Parliament, provision has been made for the appointment of a Commission for making inquiries under Legislative authority, into the just losses sus tained by parties in Lower Canada, whose property was destroyed during the rebellion in 1837 and 1838, and you will see by the accompanying commission that his Excellency the Governor-General has been pleased to appoint you to be commissioners for that purpose. His Excellency being of opinion that it may be satisfactory to you in the discharge of your arduous duties, to be informed of the views in which the Act originated, and, according to ich it ought, in the opinion of his Excellency, to be carried into effect, has commanded me to say that the Bill having been originally framed upon the precedent of that for the payment of similar losses in Upper Cauada, and the proceedings taken by former Provincial Administrations under the Governments of Lord Metcalf and Lord Catheart, was regarded as little liable to misapprehension or misconstruction. And in acceding to the introduction of the Proviso contained in the Preamble, e government acted not from an impression of the necessity such an amendment, for the purpose of which it was prosed to be desired, but from an anxiety to meet the wishes of others, and if possible, of thus avoiding an occasion of cavil inding such, however, not to be the effect of their acquiescence in that proposition, it became necessary to proceed with the measure as it now stands in the Statute Book. The Government designed by the introduction of the measure to eradicate all tendency to disloyalty and disaffection, by removing every remaining just cause of complaint in reference to the unfortunate events of 1837 and 1838, and establishing the institutions of the country in the hearts and affections of the people. The object of the Act, therefore, was not to counenance rebellion, or to compensate the losses of persons guilty of the heinous crime of treason. Its design, as conveyed in P. M. Vankoughnet, J. G. Bowes, and Donald Bethune.

Ir. Lewis Moffatt was chosen, but unable to attend, owing evere family indisposition. Mr. George Duggan, Junr, declined, owing to pressing private engagements.—Colonist.

That idea is discovered to be foolish. It is no longer to be the boast of England that her flag floats triumphant in every sea, and that her morning dram accompanies the sun in his course throughout the world. It was a foolish pride which gained her no respect among the nations, that her castles towered in every land, and that she held the keys of every sea, All these things are to pass away, and the millious spent in
