

co-chairs: Joanna Miller, Poughkeepsie, New York; and Tania Rana, Montreal, Quebec

1. Opening Plenary
 2. The Context (David Bell, Director, Centre for Strategic Studies, University of Toronto)
 3. NATO and the Strategic Concept Review (John Barrett, NATO Secretary General)
 4. The Role of Nuclear Weapons in NATO's Strategic Concept (John Barrett, NATO Secretary General)
 5. The Role of Nuclear Weapons in NATO's Strategic Concept (John Barrett, NATO Secretary General)
 6. The Role of Nuclear Weapons in NATO's Strategic Concept (John Barrett, NATO Secretary General)
 7. The Role of Nuclear Weapons in NATO's Strategic Concept (John Barrett, NATO Secretary General)
 8. The Role of Nuclear Weapons in NATO's Strategic Concept (John Barrett, NATO Secretary General)
 9. The Role of Nuclear Weapons in NATO's Strategic Concept (John Barrett, NATO Secretary General)
 10. The Role of Nuclear Weapons in NATO's Strategic Concept (John Barrett, NATO Secretary General)

PRACTICAL STEPS FOR CANADIAN POLICY DEVELOPMENT ON NUCLEAR WEAPONS ISSUES

27 MARCH 1998

A seminar co-sponsored by the Canadian Centre for Foreign Policy Development and the Canadian Network to Abolish Nuclear Weapons

Report prepared by Physicians for Global Survival
 tel 613 233 1982 • fax 613 233 9028 • pgs@web.net

One of the reasons for updating the Strategic Concept now is that there have been many changes in the international security landscape since 1991. Since 1991, there have been significant changes in the international security landscape, including the end of the Cold War, the emergence of new powers, and the proliferation of nuclear weapons. These changes have created a new and more complex security environment, which requires a new Strategic Concept to address the challenges of the 21st century.

One of the reasons for updating the Strategic Concept now is that there have been many changes in the international security landscape since 1991. Since 1991, there have been significant changes in the international security landscape, including the end of the Cold War, the emergence of new powers, and the proliferation of nuclear weapons. These changes have created a new and more complex security environment, which requires a new Strategic Concept to address the challenges of the 21st century.