

On one of the days that we happened to be touring the Ottawa area, my daughter had just finished a can of Coca-Cola or Pepsi and wanted to return the can. In British Columbia we have a five cent return on the cans. It is the law in British Columbia that if you purchase a bottle or can of pop that in fact the retail outlet that sold you that commodity will in fact take the recycled material back. We found to our dismay, because she came out looking quite perplexed, that in fact there was no refund policy in Ottawa, no refund policy I assume throughout the Province of Ontario. I think it brings to question what is happening province by province across this country. Perhaps it is indicative that the federal Government needs to send a very strong message throughout the country that we do need encouragement of the recycling of our non-renewable resources.
