

poor judgment all the way through. There was no reason whatever why the GAZETTE should not have used Mr. Peters' story when he first prepared it, and I cannot understand why Mr. Judah should have asked that the news be withheld: apparently he did not appreciate that the Museums of which he is Curator would have received double publicity, because while the GAZETTE would have run the Museums story some days ago, they could scarcely ignore some reference when Sir Henry Miers actually arrived.

Please be assured of three things:

First, I am sorry Mr. Judah broke faith with your reporter. Second, we acknowledge with extreme gratitude the cooperation we have received from the GAZETTE. Third, we try at all times to be fair to both papers.

Ever yours faithfully,

Principal.
