

would be left open to the insults of the maritime powers, he saw the necessity of changing his party, which induced him to make a treaty with us in 1703; and when the French Minister, M. de Châteauneuf, reproached him for thus changing sides, Don Pedro replied, with great spirit “If your master had sent thirty ships of the line to cruize between Lisbon and Setubal, I had never quitted his alliance; and therefore I would have you let him know, that he ought to blame himself, not me, for the consequences.” By the treaty of commerce concluded with the same crown by mr. Methuen, we were prodigious gainers; and I will even venture to say, that this single alliance was worth more to us, than all the negotiations in the former reign. The Portuguese began to feel the comfortable effects of the mines they had discovered in Brazil, and the prodigious commerce that followed thereupon with us, made their good luck, in this respect, in a great measure ours also; and so it has been ever since, otherwise I know not how the expences of the war could have been born: for as doctor Davenant justly computed the running cash of this kingdom, at the time the revolution happened, could not be above eighteen millions; at the accession of the queen we had not so much; but at the time of concluding the union it was encreased again very considerably, which must be attributed in a great measure to our Portugal trade; and this, as I have made it manifest, we owed entirely to our superiour power at sea.

As to our trade with the Spanish West-Indies, by the canal of Cadiz, it was certainly very much interrupted by the war at the beginning; but afterwards it was in a good measure restored, as well by our direct correspondence with Spain, after the reduction of several provinces under the power of king Charles III. as thro’ Portugal, by which a very great, though contraband, trade was carried on. We were at the same time very great gainers by our trade with the Spaniards in the West-Indies, as I am satisfied from several
