In London, to another in the Country.

Dear Sir,

THE Behaviour of the North American Colonists upon the Subject of the Stamp Duty, still continues to be the general Topick of political Discussion; many People concurring with them in their Ideas of the Oppression, and the wiser many (in my Opinion) insisting with the Mother Country on it's Right of prescribing such Laws, and raising such Supplies amongst them, as the Exigence of our own, or their, internal Situation may suggest. For my Part, I really think the
