HISTORY OF THE 12

IV.

BOOK By this conformation, they are guarded from those ill effects which an almost continual strong glare of fun-thine might otherwite produce; and it is a curious circumitance, that their fkin feels confiderably colder than that of a European; a proof, I think, that nature has contrived fome peculiar means of protecting them from the heat, which the has denied to the nations of temperate regions, as unneceffiry. Accordingly, though their mode of living differs in no respect from that of the European refidents, they are rarely obnoxious to those inflammatory diforders which frequently prove fatal to the latter.

> THE ladies of these Islands have indeed greater caufe to boaft of this fortunate exemption, than the men; a pre-eminence acquired undoubtedly by the calm and even tenour of their lives, and by an habitual temperance and felf-denial. Except the exercise of dancing, in which they delight and excel, they have no amufement or avocation to impel them to much exertion of either body or mind. Those midnight affemblies and gambling conventions, wherein health, fortune, and beauty, are fo frequently facrificed in the cities of Europe, are here happily unknown. In their diet, the Creole women are, I think, abstemious even to a fault. Simple water, or lemonade, is the ftrongest beverage in which they indulge; and a vegetable mefs at noon, feafoned ma rel ma acc Ind law able rall moi to t and ercit iny pror Loc may affer will butc rally tion perfe wife of th thefe agree if ma in th pects