

Canadian Railroad Workers to Seek More Pay at Once

TORONTO, July 22.—Representatives of the railroad brotherhoods in this country will immediately ask the Railway Association of Canada to open negotiations with them on behalf of the 200,000 railroad workers with the recent wage award affecting United States railways as a basis of negotiation, according to a statement credited in an interview here to F. J. Flannery, general organizer for Canada of the international brotherhood of freight handlers and station employees. Mr. Flannery said he believed the award would be accepted by the Canadian railway.

WINDSOR, July 22.—Damaged to the extent of $700, and its mileage indicator showing it had travelled 700 miles with in the past week since it was stolen, the wrecked car of Magistrate Miers of Windsor, was today recovered in a broken-down condition on Moy avenue by the local police. An inventory of damage showed the flywheel broken, body strained, tires ripped, torn and punctured, front axle and fenders badly bent, and innumerable other scars testifying to rough usage. The police have no clue to the identity of the thieves.

For a "Great" Vacation try the Great Lakes Trip by Canadian Pacific Steamer

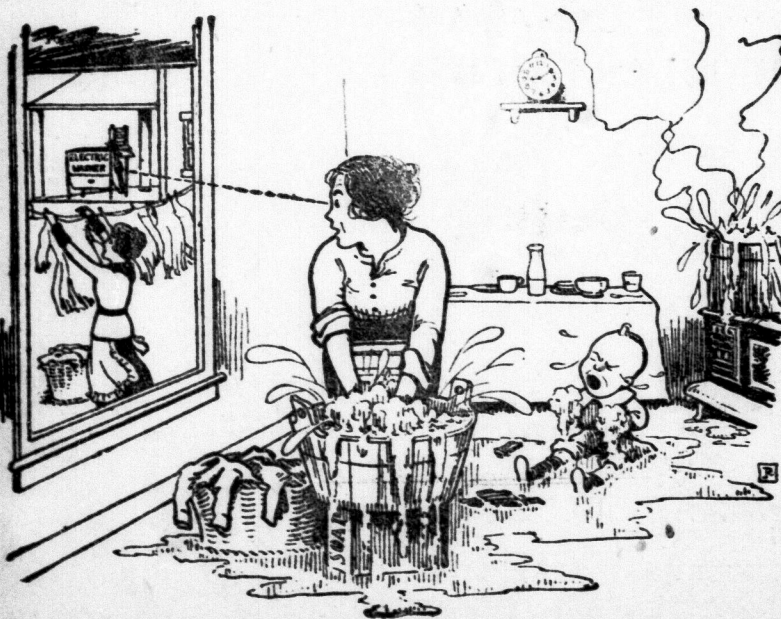

FOR when the mercury is playing around in the upper eighties, and you wish Henry Ford would invent a self-refrigerating collar, do you ever stop to remember that the temperature of Lake Superior never rises above 40 degrees? What if you don't spare the time for a long holiday? The Canadian Pacific Railway's Clyde-built steamships make a five-day trip from Fort McNicoll to Fort William and back, during which you can be as cool as an Eskimo and as comfortable as a clubman.

Roomy cabins, the best of chefs—oh, those broiled Lake Superior whitefish!—tea on deck under the lazy awnings—seagulls against the long, northern sunset—and a breeze from a thousand miles of clean pine woods, on duty twenty-four hours in the day.

Then—if you find you've got more time than you counted on—how about a week on the Nipigon River, forty miles from Fort William, with guides, canoes, and camp fires and white water under the moon—and more speckled trout than you know what to do with?

VOLENTINE FREE AT LAST TOWED SCHOOL DAY GIRL

Chicago Court Annuls "Kidnap Marriage."

Chicago, July 22.—Daniel Volentine, Aurora's "poor little rich boy," who was left $1,000,000 when he was 14, and found himself an unwilling husband at eighteen, is at last free to marry the sweetheart of his high school days, Miss Mildred Wesener.

Judge Adam A. C. Cliffe in the Kane County Circuit Court at Geneva yesterday, granted his plea for an annulment of his marriage to Nora Ustard Volentine. The latter is said to have withdrawn her opposition following a settlement of approximately $10,000.

Volentine, who is now 23 years old, told Judge Cliffe he was attending the Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., when, on October 27, 1915, J. Bruce Amell, now assistant state's attorney, appeared at the school and told him he would have to marry Miss Ustard. A warrant had been taken out for his arrest, he said, and he told him, and his life would be in peril if he did not wed.

Girl Joins Party.

He said he was brought to Chicago in an automobile, and that Miss Ustard joined the party here. They then drove to Crown Point, Ind., he says.

Amell told him he would have to wear a white suit and a white bow tie, and he was 21 years old in obtaining a license. The marriage was performed, and young Volentine went back to school.

Months later a baby girl was born to Mrs. Nora Volentine. Young Volentine denied parentage and produced Gustave Anderson, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who admitted he was the child's father. Mrs. Volentine then obtained alimony of $50 a month.

When America entered the war young Volentine went into the army, and was studying aviation when the armistice was signed. During his absence, Mrs. Ammon Wesener and her daughter, Mildred, occupied his home in Aurora. When he returned from the army he had a new home constructed.

Wife Sues for $50,000.

In the meantime the court had reduced Mrs. Volentine's alimony from $50 to $20 a month. She filed suit for $50,000 damages against Miss Wesener, and the latter was ordered to come into court and explain who purchased automobiles, diamonds and fine clothes for her.

Mildred and I have been sweethearts for years," Volentine said. "Now I hope we will be married before long."

"Our engagement never has been broken," said Miss Wesener, who is now 22. "We were engaged long before Dan was forced into this sordid plot with this other girl. We became engaged December 23."

"Dan has always called me 'muzzy,'" Mrs. Wesener stated. "He really had no home, but came here from the war, and he came to live with us until his new home was finished."

"I killed him," she said quietly. "He was rough, drunken and unfaithful. Then I put his body in a trunk, and buried it in the cellar with the help of a male domestic. The latter took no part in the killing. He asked no questions and I told him nothing."

When the magistrate recovered from stupefaction, he gasped:

"Do you feel no remorse?"

"Why should I?" said the madame.

Then she returned to the station to await the return train to Geneva. For, by the French statute of limitations, she cannot be prosecuted for a crime committed fifteen years ago.

DETROIT, July 22.—Possibilities of the aeroplane as never before tested out in this country will be demonstrated by the United States Army Service, in the competitive aerial shooting match held in August at Camp Perry, Ohio.

In the evolution of this match, Detroit-made aircraft engines will compete with those of other factories in this country and with crack engines made by Germany in the last year of the war.

The event will be the world's first competitive aerial shooting match, it was announced Sunday by the air service. It will demonstrate the value of the service in national defence and in the evolution of commercial possibilities of air travel.

Varied Ground Exhibit.

The ground exhibit will, it is announced, comprise aerial photography, including a photographic map of the reservation, aircraft gun, and different types of aeroplanes "on the line." These aeroplanes will be fully equipped with machine guns, and will be marked with placards indicating the type of plane, its mission, its armament, its speed performance, and so forth.

One plane will be equipped with eight machine guns, and only one of its kind so equipped, and is a veritable flying arsenal.

Future wars will be decided in the air or by the perfection and superiority of aerial equipment. Here one can see the machine gun to be fired out through the revolving propeller of an aeroplane in flight and also the sights that are used in connection with these guns and those that are used in accurately dropping huge bombs from the air. Bombs weighing as much as 1,100 pounds, or over half a ton, filled with T. N. T., can be dropped from the air with deadly precision by the use of sights now being perfected. Wireless telephones and telegraph will be exhibited, and demonstrated.

An exhibit and demonstration of the rocketing nacelle used in the ground schools during the training of pilots and observers for the army air service will be given. It is rumored that possibly a Ruggies Oriole may be equipped with a machine gun and mounted on a derrick tower and entries made for live shooting from this for eligible spectators.

Thrilling Aerial Exhibit.

The aerial exhibit will be the most thrilling to most of those in attendance, and it includes aerial manoeuvres, competitive flights, closed course air races, wireless control of aeroplane formations and gunnery both from the ground and from the air. A specially equipped German Fokker D-7 aeroplane will be used in some of the wireless demonstrations. This plane was captured by the army air service during the war. Aerial manoeuvres will be executed and there will be sham combat in the air during which all the tricks known to aviation will be demonstrated, including how to escape from a dogfight, how to land, and when cornered and how to fight an adversary and shoot him to earth.

The aerial shooting contest is to be the biggest feature. In this event firing at targets from rocketing nacelles on the ground will permit close inspection by the spectators. The actual fire from planes in the air will be directed against moving objects, silhouette targets and moving objectives. There will be deflection practice against towed targets. As a final episode, a grand attack will be staged in full tactical formation.

KICKING HORSE KNOCKS OFF MURDER CASKET

Then Widow Admits She "Executed" Spouse.

PARIS, July 22.—The historic old Norm town of Bayeux, where William the Conqueror came from, has just witnessed the third act of a tragedy as dramatic as any of its storied past.

Fifteen years ago the Golden Lion tavern was kept by a couple named Huchez. The man was about 35 years old, considerably younger than his wife, and his good looks and reported errand heart had given rise to no small amount of scandal. In the fall of 1905 he disappeared—he had run away to America, it was whispered, and not long.

Wife Glad He's Gone.

In reply to inquiries—Mrs. Huchez was not a woman to encourage curiosity—the wife declared: "He's gone, and it's good riddance. I don't care where he goes to, but I guess he won't bother any more."

As it happened, I visited the Golden Lion at the beginning of 1918. I remember a very pretty waitress there, and remember, too, how the local worthies with rods and whips alternately her and the sombre figure of Mrs. Huchez behind the pay desk, conveyed the story of the banker's flight and his supposed reasons.

A few months afterward Mrs. Huchez sold the inn and opened a small cafe in Bayeux. She stayed there until a year or two before the war, when she retired to a life of independence at Grenoble.

That was the first act of the tragedy. The second act is short and gruesome. A few weeks ago a restive horse was stamping impatiently in a straw heap at the end of the Golden Lion alley. Suddenly his foot went through the ground, and half an hour later a huge found him with his head firmly fixed in the splintered top of a wooden trunk.

Buried Treasure.

"Buried treasure" was the word that flashed through the inn, and soon there was a curious group thronged with the joyous anticipation of watching the hostler and his mate digging furiously in a dusty corner.

A big, square trunk was brought to light, and a sharp jerk of the pickaxe wrrenched off the cover. The crowd that had pressed forward shrank back in horror—huddled in shredded clothing lay the skeleton of a man. The mystery of where Huchez had gone was a mystery no longer.

The examining magistrate from Paris was not slow in developing a theory everything pointing to Mme. Huchez as her husband's murderer. That ends the second act. The third act is still in progress.

A dignified, white-haired old woman stopped yesterday at a small cafe near Bayeux station and asked for the office of the examining magistrate from Paris. Arrived there, she announced herself as Mme. Huchez. She told the officials she had come from Grenoble to explain about her husband's death.

"I killed him," she said quietly. "He was rough, drunken and unfaithful. Then I put his body in a trunk, and buried it in the cellar with the help of a male domestic. The latter took no part in the killing. He asked no questions and I told him nothing."

When the magistrate recovered from stupefaction, he gasped:
