PLACE WHERE GREAT DRIVE IS UNDER WAY

One of Strongest Parts Of German Line

Anzac Crucial Sector

Much Wooded and Marshy Ground—Terrific Bombardment of a Week in Preparation for Dash of the Infantry

British Headquarters in France, Thursday.—(By the Associated Press)—The scene of the present British offensive includes one of the most important and strongest parts of the German line in this section, and has been marked by some of the most bitter fighting since the Allies seven weeks ago began their drive, which has become known as the battle of Flanders. The wooded elevations east and southeast of Ypres, among which are such dominating positions as Glencorse Wood and Inverness Cope, were the vital points and the Germans had made their defence here as nearly impregnable as they were able. The battles of the last few weeks bear witness to the strength of the defences.

Crucial Sector
The crucial sector may be said to be the ridge known as Anzac, about a mile southwest of Zonnebeke. Southwest of Anzac is Nun's Wood and just east of this is the famous Polygon Wood. When the British in August fought their way to this wood they found Nun's wood so flooded that they were forced to go around it, and the ground here still presents great difficulties. Nun's Wood merges into Glencorse Wood, on Inverness Cope of undying fame.

Between Glencorse Wood and Inverness is an open stretch of solid ground of some 400 yards, and here, on the Pile-Clarence Farm, the Germans had built great steel and concrete redoubts whose machine guns dominated the southern part of Glencorse Wood and the northern section of Inverness. Below Inverness are Dumbarton Lakes and the ground about them is pitted with shell craters, filled with water. The paths and trenches here were wiped out by artillery fire and the shell holes are so closely together that there is no space to walk around them. In most places the mud and water are knee deep.

Still further south is Shrewsbury Forest, through which the British line ran, and the ground in front of the British trenches is a mass of tangled barbed wire. Just below Shrewsbury Forest is Belgian Wood, which lies near Hebeke. There are many other little bits of forest scattered through this section, most of them in marshy ground which was rendered still more difficult by the devastation wrought by shells.

Between Hebeke and the river Lys the country is more open and is dominated by Messines. North of the Ypres-Roulers railway the country is the level of the sea, and the ground is marshy ground, although there are a few wooded stretches.

The Preparation
The British began an intense artillery preparation with guns of all calibre about a week ago, and this continued with unabating fury until today. The artillery work resulted in a large number of German guns being silenced. The entire front was searched out by high explosives, and as an additional precaution the British gunners kept putting down a heavy barrage fire, first in one place and then in another, and sweeping the whole country.

The German guns, of course, have not been silent, but their fire was comparatively weak. All this artillery preparation by the British was vital if there was to be hope of success, for they knew that their infantry faced a task that would try their mettle to the fullest. In previous attacks the shell hole warfare conducted by the Germans, has proved a grave embarrassment, and it was only a bombardment such as was conducted that could wipe out these concealed positions. It was possible the Germans should not have known that an offensive was being prepared, but it appears from statements by prisoners, that there was much doubt as to all exact place where the British would strike. For the last fortnight the policy of the Germans has been one of inaction, although they undoubtedly made every effort to improve their positions since the offensive in August.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious to the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified coconut oil, for it is pure and entirely grassless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.
