VOTE IN PARLIAMENT FOR DRILL HALL HERE; POST OFFICE FOR FAIRVILLE

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—In supply today, parliament passed the estimates for public buildings in Nova Scotia.

On the New Brunswick list, on a vote of $30,000 for a public building at Campbellton, Hon. Mr. Pugsley explained that the town had been destroyed by fire and the public building was needed. The emergency step had been taken of making a governor-general's warrant to provide for immediate construction.

Twelve thousand dollars was voted for a post office at Fairville.

Fifteen thousand dollars for a public building at Grand Falls.

Three thousand dollars for a public building at Hampton.

Fifteen thousand dollars for a public building at Hillsboro.

On a vote of $7,000 for an armory at Moncton, Dr. Pugsley said the amount would not more than purchase the site which had been selected by the militia department, would include a parade ground and which would be acquired by appropriation. Plans had not been completed and the total cost had not been calculated. The building would be a commodious one.

On a vote of $100,000 for the St. John drill hall, Hon. Dr. Pugsley said that the town needed a drill hall badly, and that arrangements had been made to fill that want.

Other votes put through were $4,000 for repairs to St. John public buildings.

Three thousand dollars for the water works on Paradise Island.

Five thousand dollars for a doctor's house at the Treadwell Lazaretto.

Disease Lurks in Cup

(Toronto Telegram)
"On the edges of public drinking cups have been found the germs of tuberculosis, diphtheria and other diseases."
This statement by Dr. Hastings, M. H. O., prefaced a declaration by him that the public drinking cup must go.
"No sane person would think of using the same tooth brush that hundreds of other people use, and yet unquestionably they go on drinking out of the same germ-laden cups," said Dr. Hastings.
The M. H. O. has consulted with Park Commissioner Wilson and Property Commissioner Harris, and these officials are willing to cooperate with him in a campaign against the universal drinking utensil. Mr. Wilson will ask for an appropriation to install in all the parks sanitary drinking fountains, such as have been already placed in some of the parks, and the property commissioner will install bracket fountains in the city hall.

GLASS THAT WILL NOT BREAK

Baccarat, France, has the honor of producing the first glass that is unbreakable. The new process has been successfully applied to the manufacture of lamp chimneys for use in coal mines containing much fire-damp. The glassmakers of Baccarat have also succeeded in increasing the elasticity of the glass. This they accomplish by adding diastase dissolved in ordinary crystal glass—Success Magazine.

The DeBercy Affair

BY GORDON HOLMES
Author of "A Masterpiece Disastrous," "By Force of Circumstances," etc.
(Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto)

(CHAPTER VI (Continued))

"With pleasure," said Clarke, but there was no pleasure in his early Russian face, in which rage shone notwithstanding a marvelous makeup. Still, he opened the paper under the lamp—a sheet of note-paper with some lines of writing on the first page; and on the top of it, printed the name of a hotel, "The Swan, Toronto."

The two detectives peered over it. To the illimitable surprise of both, this letter, stolen by Clarke from Janco's pocket, was addressed to Clarke himself—a letter from Rupert Osborne, the millionaire. And Osborne said in it:

Dear Inspector Clarke:—Yours of the 7th duly to hand. In reply to your inquiry, I am not aware that the late Miss Rose de Bercy had any relations with Anarchists, either in London or in Paris, other than those which have been mentioned in the papers—i. e., a purely professional interest for stage purposes. I think it unlikely that her connection with them extended further.

I am,
Sincerely yours,
RUPERT OSBORNE.

Furneaux and Clarke looked at each other in a blank bewilderment that was not assumed by either man.

"Did you write to Mr. Osborne, asking that question?" asked Furneaux.

"No," said Clarke—"never. I didn't even know where Osborne was."

"So Janco must have written to him in your name?" said Furneaux. "Janco, then, wishes to know how much information Osborne can give you as to Mademoiselle de Bercy's association with Anarchists. That seems clear. But why should Janco think that you particularly are interested in knowing?"

Clarke flushed hotly under the point being conveyed that he was investigating the case on his own private account and in a secret way. As a matter of fact, it was by this time fully convinced that Rose de Bercy's murder was the work of Anarchist hands, but he was so fearful of official reprimand from Winter that he only answered:

"Why Janco should think that I am interested, I can't imagine. It beats me."

"And how can Janco know where Osborne is, or his assumed name, to write to him?" muttered Furneaux. "I thought that was a secret between you and Winter, and myself."

Clarke, equally puzzled, scratched his head under his wig, which had been in sufficiently hot in that stifling room.

"Janco and his crew must be keeping an eye on Osborne, it seems for some reason," he exclaimed.

"Heaven knows why—I don't. I am out of the DeBercy case, of course. I am interested in the Janco crowd—is political."

"Let me see the letter again," said Furneaux, and he read it carefully once more. Then he opened the sheet, as if seeking additional information from the blank pages, turned it over, looked at the back—and there at the back he saw something else that was astounding, for the words "Rosalia" near the bottom of the page, in Osborne's handwriting, were written "Rosalia!"

"Who is 'Rosalia!'" asked Furneaux—"see here, an impression from some other letter written at the same time?"

"Don't know, I'm sure," said Clarke. "A sister, perhaps?"

"A sister. Why, though, should his sister's name appear at the back of a note written to Janco, or to Inspector Clarke, as he thought?" said Furneaux to himself, deep in meditation. He suddenly added brightly: "Now, Clarke, there's a puzzle for you!"

"I don't see it, I see any puzzle, I mean. It might have appeared on any other letter, say to his bankers, or to a friend. It was a mere accident. There is nothing in that."

"Quite right," grinned Furneaux. "And it was a sister, I'm sure, said Clarke. "It may be another woman's name," said Clarke sagely. "I'd hardly be on my new grave before the other one is cold in her grave, as the saying is."

Furneaux laughed a low, mysterious laugh, and ran hard and bitter in the ears of the other.

"I'll keep this, if you don't mind," he said, slipping into the detective again. Meantime, Furneaux knew that there were other papers of Janco's in Clarke's pocket, and he lingered a little, giving his colleague a change of exhibiting them. Clarke made no move, however, so he put out his hand saying, "Well, good luck," and disappeared toward his residence, Hampstead way. But in Southampton Row an overwhelming impatience to see the other Janco papers overcame him, and he was constrained to examine them as he went.

Two were bills. A third was a newspaper cutting from the Matin commenting on the murder in Fiddisham Mansions. The fourth had power to arrest Clarke's steps. It was a letter of three closely-written pages—in French; and though Clarke's French, though for what matter it could walk, if it could not fly, in ten minutes he had read and understood.

St. Petersburg says that since the secret meeting, a steady growth of courage in the rank-and-file is observable. As for

Fraternal Prescription For Nervous Weakness

(From "Medical Reports.")
Thousands of men, nervous wrecks, have found the following "Fraternal prescription" a blessing and a boon. Such men, lack energy, easily discouraged, lacking in self-esteem and confidence. They suffer from cold extremities, thin watery blood, nervousness, sleeplessness, frightful dreams, irascibility, and an inability to perform the ordinary natural and rational acts or duties such as any healthy normal man can.

A vigorous man works, plays, eats and sleeps always with the keenest enjoyment. The greater his exertions are the stronger become his appetite and slumbers.

The nervous man seems always tired and worn out. Getting things no relief. Sleep brings no refreshment, all because of an abnormal condition of the nervous system, brought about by—well, no matter what—the desire is for relief and freedom with rich, red blood surging through the body supplying the sensitive nerves with all the power of sensation, so that sleep is refreshing, food is delicious, work is play and play is pleasure.

Obtain three ounces of syrup of cod liver oil, compound in a six ounce bottle. To this, add one ounce of compound fluid balsam of Peru and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce of tincture of cod liver oil (not cod liver oil, and one ounce of compound essence cod liver. Mix, shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring, until you are vigorous, bounding new-health takes hold of the tired, exhausted nerves. Only a few weeks treatment will astonish, and rejuvenate, because the treatment is the right thing at the right time, and contains no deceptive opiates.

The average man would rather lose $50 on a horse race than pay $3 for taxes. Why?

The Famous Rayo

Is the Lamp of Real Beauty because it gives the best light of all lamps. The Rayo gives a white, soft, mellow, diffused light—easy on the eye because it cannot flicker. You can use your eyes as long as you wish under the Rayo light without strain.

The Rayo Lamp is low priced, and even though you pay $5, $10 or $20 for other lamps, you may get more expensive decorations but you cannot get a better light than the low-priced Rayo gives. A strong, durable shade-holder holds the shade on firm and true. This season's new burner adds strength and appearance.
