PHILLIPS-PICKHART.

As previously announced by some two hundred invitations, Centenary church Thursday was the scene of an interesting event, which, judging from the attendance, has caused an unusual stir in the social circles of this city. J. Ainslie Phillips, the well known commercial man, and Mrs. Hannah Pickart (nee Blake), were the contracting parties, and Rev. J. Read performed the ceremony which made the twain man and wife.

The bride, who was unattended, was handsemely gowned in a bluett cloth costume, with white satin trimmings. After the ceremony the happy pair drove to their future residence, 185 St. James street, where a dainty collation was partaken of.

The guests filled the house and overflowed upon St. James street for several blocks, where blazing bonfires added a picturesque touch to this scene of connubial bliss.

Inside, the company which had gathered to extend their hearty construintions, were entertained by Mr. Phillips in his own inimitable style. Songs and teasts to the future happiness of the pair, whose popularity seems unbounded, occupied the evening, which passed away all to Outside the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips kept up their mere pronounced demonstrations of pleasure until well into the night.

The bride received many beautiful presents, that from the groom being a handsome fliagree belt of several
