J. E. V. Atkin, former publisher of the Alvington Free Press, has been transferred by the firm of McConnell and Ferguson from London to their western office in Winnipeg.

Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the saw mill of John Drake at Cairngorm. The place is a total ruin. The loss will be about $4,000, partly covered by insurance.

The death of Mrs. Flora MacAlpine, relict of the late Hugh Leitch of Alvington, occurred on Sunday, November 10, in her 69th year. The funeral took place to Kilmartin cemetery.

According to the postoffice authorities the boys overseas will be fairly swamped with Christmas-cheer parcels this coming Yuletide. The quantity of package mail for overseas is probably the largest since the war began.

If proper response to the request to churches to hold union services to conserve fuel is not forthcoming, orders will be issued making necessary regulations, says a bulletin recently issued by the officials in Toronto in charge of the fuel administrations for Ontario.

The death occurred at her home in Wardsville on November 14th of Mrs. David Hutchison. Deceased leaves her husband, one son and daughter-in-law and two grandchildren. For many years Mrs. Hutchison lived in Aldborough and last spring moved to the Amasa Thomas farm at Wardsville.

A Presbyterian church is likely to be organized at the village of Middlemiss. For the organization of a congregation and the supplying of services a petition was received recently by London Presbytery, from Middlemiss, with the signatures of 59 residents of the district attached. The petition was referred to the Melbourne commission with instructions to visit and report.

Parkhill's electric light plant, owned and operated for twenty-seven years by H. C. Baird & Son, is being scrapped. It was expected that the town would be supplied with hydro this fall but hydro people have a demand, all most greater than the supply without taking over any more towns, and the citizens of Parkhill as a whole found the cost of wiring their homes and business places almost prohibitive. Consequently not enough places were wired to warrant the hydro being turned on.

Our evaporator is running full blast and the employees are working full time.

Mrs. A. Fletcher of Riverside is ill. Mr. and Mrs. Davis have got settled in their new home.

LETTER FROM CORPORAL HAWES

France, October 4, 1918.
Dear Sir,—I have at last come to the conclusion that it was time I wrote you a few lines in order to let you know that I am receiving your paper regularly and thank you very much for same. Although I am not a Canadian-born citizen I consider myself as such and love to get The Transcript each week; it seems to bring me very close to Glencoe and all my friends there and in the vicinity. The last two I have got have been very interesting. One of them contained the list of the boys on the honor rolls of the three churches. After reading it I sent it home, instructing them to keep it for me as a souvenir.

During my residence in the vicinity of Glencoe, a matter of roughly six years, I made lots of friends and was quite happy and contented. Finally enlisting with the Glencoe boys of the 15th Battalion I left for overseas, and after a short stay in England arrived in France in March, 1917, where I have been ever since. Occasionally I run across a few of my old Glencoe chums, who I am glad to say are still in the service. A few of them I'm sorry to know have made the supreme sacrifice, but on the whole I think our Glencoe boys have been very lucky. As for myself, I haven't been in a fighting unit, as I was turned down, but since coming to France have served in a construction battalion and have now got a new job as orderly-room corporal in the Canadian Labor Group Headquarters, so you see I am pretty well fixed at present. My present address is as follows:—(802584) Cpl. W. de C. Hawes, Canadian Labor Group Headquarters, B.E.F., France.

Well, sir, I guess you will be more proud than ever now of the boys from the Land of the Maple Leaf. In the recent heavy fighting they have again shown the Boche what Canadians can do.

Lately, I don't know the reason why, mail from Canada seems to come very irregularly and sparsely. I guess maybe everybody has been too busy this summer through the scarcity of labor.

Well, sir, I guess I shall now close, as I am not much of a letter-writer. Again thanking you for your kind consideration in sending The Transcript, and hoping this letter finds you in the best of health, I remain,

Yours very respectfully,
Cpl. W. de C. Hawes.

A sure corrective of flatulency.—When the undigested food lies in the stomach it throws off gases, causing pain and oppression in the stomach region. The belching or eructation of these gases is offensive and the only way to prevent them is to restore the stomach to proper action.

Parade's Vegetable Pills will do this. Simple directions go with each packet and a course of them taken systematically is certain to effect a cure.

GLENCOE WINS FLAG AND CROWN

Glencoe went away beyond the objective in the purchase of Victory Bonds, the total amount signed up being over $100,000. The amount allotted as Glencoe's objective was $70,000. Alex. McAlpine, Jr., and J. E. Roome were the canvassers. On Saturday Reeve A. J. Wright received the honor flag awarded to all cities, towns and villages that attained their objective. A crown is added to these flags for each 25 per cent. of the objective subscribed above that amount, so that Glencoe will have at least one crown on its flag. The flag will be raised on the municipal flag staff the first day that weather permits and will thereafter be displayed in a conspicuous place permanently in the town hall.

HOW PRIVATE GRAY FELL

Two letters received by Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Gray of Newbury give some details regarding the death of their son, Private George Gray, who fell while defending the world's great cause in France on September 27th.

The officer in command of his company writes:—"It is with deepest regret that I have to inform you of the death of your son, Pte. George Gray, on the 27th of September, during a gallant attack on the enemy defenses in front of Bousillon Wood. He was advancing under heavy machine gun and shell fire when he was severely wounded in the leg. He was immediately evacuated to the dressing station, but unfortunately we were informed that he died shortly after. During his short association with this unit he had shown great promise and his loss is keenly felt. Please accept my deepest sympathy in your great bereavement."

From the chaplain of his battalion:—"I am writing to assure you of the sincere sympathy of our whole battalion with you in the death of your son, Pte. George Gray, who passed away on September 27th of wounds received in the early morning of that day. During our attack on the Marquion line he was very severely wounded in the leg by pieces of shrapnel from a bursting shell. He was given immediate medical attention and sent out to the rear through a field ambulance, but he did not survive the severity of his wound and the shock and died later that day at the main dressing station. The next day his body was reverently laid to rest in the British military cemetery in plot 1, row B, grave 34. His personal effects are being forwarded to you but please do not look for them to arrive before January. Your son had been with us only a short time but had already won the respect and esteem of his fellow soldiers as a brave man and a loyal comrade. May the knowledge of his self-sacrifice in a just and righteous cause help you to bear your loss, and Almighty God in His mercy comfort and sustain you."

APPIN

The services in Appin on Sunday were of special interest, being in the nature of thanksgiving for the close of the war and the re-opening of the churches after the epidemic. The morning service in the Presbyterian church was well attended. The church was becomingly adorned with flowers and plants. The choir gave a beautiful rendering of a very appropriate anthem, "The Lord of Hosts is With Us." Mr. McCulloch took as his text the words from the prayer of King David recorded in I. Chron. 29: "Thine, O Lord, is the greatness and the power and the glory and the victory and the majesty: thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all: in thine hand it is to make great and to give strength unto all. Now therefore, our God, we thank thee and praise thy glorious name." At the close of the service the congregation remained seated while the organist played the pathetic music of Handel's "Dead March in Saul" in honor of our heroic dead. A union service in the evening was held in the Methodist church, which was also becomingly decorated. Special music was furnished by the choir. The service was in charge of the pastor, Mr. Whaley, and Messrs. Charles Macfie and E. V. Thornton led in prayer. Mr. McCulloch preached the sermon from Psalm 76—"Thou didst cause judgment to be heard from heaven: the earth feared and was still, when God arose to judgment to save all the meek of the earth." The speaker pointed out that the victorious close of the war should be regarded as a judgment from heaven and ought to awaken feelings of humility and awe, with gratitude to God. The heart of divine judgment is mercy "to save all the meek of the earth," and we should expect world-wide benefits from this judgment.

Wm. Stephenson's new house is rapidly nearing completion and presents a very attractive appearance.

The Women's Institute will meet on Thursday of next week at the home of Mrs. Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. James Allan spent the week-end with friends in Ridgeway and Chatham.

"How does it happen," said the teacher to the new pupil, "that your name is Allen and your mother's name is Brown?"

"Well," explained the small boy, after a moment's thought, "you see, she married again and I didn't."

CHATEAUBRIAND.

French Writer Found Inspiration on This Continent.

An interesting early connection between North America and France was established by Francois Rene de Chateaubriand, born 150 years ago. Chateaubriand, a native of St. Malo, and a member of an ancient Breton family, had a childhood solitary and melancholy, his companionship being chiefly with the waves and woods. At seventeen he already seemed worn with the fatigue of unsatisfied dreaming. In 1791 he left France for America, with the idea of discovering the Northwest Passage. The exact length of his stay on this side of the Atlantic and the extent of his travels remain largely undetermined. Chateaubriand's account of his experiences belonging rather in the realm of fiction than of fact. His stay, however, made an indelible impression on him, and some of the best of his later work is imbued with the spirit of the American wilderness and the American aborigines.

The news of the execution of Louis XVI. decided Chateaubriand to return to France, where he sided with the Royalist faction, joined the army, was wounded and retired to London as an "emigre." In the English metropolis his poverty was extreme, but he published his first work, an essay on revolutions in which he expressed extreme pessimism as to all progress, social or political. Later he began the composition of his greatest work, "The Genius of Christianity," which revived the cult of the Middle Ages, emphasized the beauty of religion and had a deep influence on literary, social manners and the progress of religious thought. One portion of this work consists of a tale called "Atala, or the Romance of Two Savages in the Desert," the scene of which is laid in North America and the chief characters of which are types of "the noble redman" whom Cooper later made familiar. "Rene," likewise a part of "The Genius of Christianity," is in the same way the forerunner of the favorite hero of Byron.

Chateaubriand returned to France during the rule of Napoleon and became admitted the chief French writer of the Napoleonic era. In "The Natchez," brought out in 1826, Chateaubriand describes American scenery and idealizes the American Indian. This is regarded as one of the greatest of his works. He continued to publish romances and accounts of his travels in various lands, the latter not always clearly distinguishable from the former. He occupied offices and engaged actively in politics. From the position of Royalist he advanced to that of Liberal, and after 1830 seemed to be a mixture of both. He wrote a history of English literature and translated "Paradise Lost" in his latter years. The last of his works, issued as an indiscretion of the publishers before Chateaubriand's death in 1848, was his "Memoirs," a brilliant account of his own life. His tomb is on the rocky islet of Grand-Bec, off the coast of Brittany.

Chateaubriand was a great landscape painter in words; he aided in restoring to art the sentiment of religion, he interpreted the romantic melancholy of his age. He was a great poet, and as an Englishman who knew it expressed it, he "wore his heart in a sling," but he measurably enlarged the range and power of the imaginative literature of his day.

Explorers on Murman Coast.

The landing of allied troops on the Murman coast would have greatly interested the seamen of the sixteenth century, when so many attempts were made to discover a northeast passage to Asia by rounding the north coast of Norway. After several futile schemes had been discussed, Sebastian Cabot promoted a movement which eventually resulted in the despatch of three ships and more than 100 men, in May, 1553. Sir Hugh Willoughby, to whom was entrusted the command of the expedition, got as far as the entrance to the White Sea, and eventually landed at a suitable place on the Murman coast. He decided to winter there, but he and his men succumbed to the Arctic conditions.

However, another member of the expedition, Chancellor, whose ship became separated from the other two, finally landed on the shores of the White Sea, where Archangel now stands. From that place he actually went to Moscow, returned to his ship, and eventually reached London again. Chancellor endeavored to repeat his Russian trip, but perished by shipwreck on the return journey.
