Sad Death of Dr. W. A. Payzant.

The terribly sad intelligence reached Wolffville yesterday morning that Dr. W. A. Payzant had committed suicide in Halifax. The whole community was shocked and could scarcely believe the news. Dr. Payzant was a most highly esteemed young man and had scores of friends. He was doing a good business here and was universally respected. The following are the particulars of the sad event as published in the Chronicle yesterday:

The deceased was a son of Dr. Payzant, of Wolffville, and a brother of Dr. James A. Payzant, who practiced in this city up to a month ago, when he removed to Hants county. He resided at Wolffville and came here on Tuesday from Montreal, where he had been spending his Christmas holidays. He registered at the Halifax, but on account of the crash could not obtain a room. Dr. Bigelow, dentist, was a friend of his and offered him a room, which he accepted. Yesterday he invited Dr. Bigelow to dine with him at the Halifax, which he did. He had supper with Dr. Bigelow at the Albion. Dr. Bigelow says that during the day and evening Dr. Payzant was very despondent and talked freely of his troubles. He spent the evening with Dr. Bigelow and about 11 o'clock began to talk about his mother, wondering if she knew where he was. Dr. Bigelow suggested that he write to her. This he did. He began two letters but threw them away. The third letter he finished. It was written in a clear hand and left attached to the writing pad on the desk. After writing the letter he rose up and went into the room he was occupying. Dr. Bigelow heard a noise like some one drinking and a moment later Dr. Payzant came to his door and said: "I took carbolic acid." Dr. Bigelow heard him say no more. Payzant was then leaning against the wall.

Dr. Bigelow immediately called Mr. James Kelliker, who occupies the room above, and telephoned the police station for assistance. Mr. Kelliker found Payzant leaning against the door. Payzant looked at him and said: "It's all over with me. I have taken carbolic acid. Pray for me." Mr. Kelliker laid him on the bed and loosened his collar. Dr. Read, Black and Wm. McKay, M. P. P., who had been called in, saw at once that medical skill was of no avail. The man was dead. He lived only about 20 minutes after taking the dose of carbolic acid, which was nearly half an ounce.

The letter was as follows: MY DARLING MOTHER: What I am guilty of I do not know, but it must be something; but if it is I wasn't my own agent. Try to forgive my neglect of you, darling mother. I send love to father, Austin and sisters and Lina. I promised Bessie on her death bed to try and be good and succeeded very poorly in my promise. I really did not know I was so bad, so wrapped up in my conceit. God forgive me. I am trying to believe in Christ. I hope God will help me. Your affectionate son, WILL.

The sad affair has cast a gloom over the town, and the heartfelt sympathy is felt for the sorrowing family.
