O'CONNELLIN IRELAND. (Continued.) From the Dublin Freeman's Journal. rullan obsequles in the metropolitan church.
The following is the translation of the Latin mscription which appeared in our last:-

TO DANIEL O'CONNELL,
A man deserving of celebrity in every age, And cannot be forgotten in his own.
A inan-who, by the splendour of his genius And surpassing eloquence
Did the life, religion, rights and liberties
Of his fellow-countrymen
Secure and guard.
Accustomed to aflairs of importance from an early age,
He found no difficulty in unravelling the decpest state plot,
Owing to the acuteness and activity of his mind.
He will be for ever equally distinguished For liberality and honour.
His door was never closed to any;
But to the needy was open with exceeding generosity.
At length all the duties to his comutry being religiously performed,
His admarsaries conquered, and faction laid asleep The Catholic Religion to which he wholly devoted himself,
Vindicated in is liberties,
From the storms of this world to the harbour of eternity,
He has betaken himself,
To the overwhelming grief as well of has own countrymen as straugers.
He died at Genoa, 16th May, in the year of our Redemption MDCCCXLVII.
He lived 71 years, 9 months, 6 days;
For age and deeds a long period;
For the protection and comfort of his people, Alas, too short!

THE COXGREGATION.

Before eleven o'clock the house was filled. The aisles and galleries were occuped by the laity.-
ccunteuance we saw the trace of sorrow-real, heartfelt sorrow, such as seldom attends the great when deach has roubech them of their power. In many an eye we saw the tear-many a smothered sob we heard. To describe the mmbers, rank, or residence of the lay gentemen, would be wholly impossible. Of the highest order of the clergy the solemn occasion called together-

It was not want of will, as the following letter amply shows, prevented other Irish'prelates being present:-

> " 2 , Williams' Park, Rathmincs, August 3d, 1847.
"Rev. and Dear Sir, -
"I did hope to be comforted in some degree for the loss we have all sustained in being deprived of our beloved Liberator and most illustrious friend, by assisting in every act of public reverence which the gratitude of our people has suggested, and particularly in those acts of Christian piety which are now the most useful to him, if he need our assistance, or productive of greater glory, if, as his happy death affords stromg reason to assume he is already in possession of the reward of his virtues and labors. With that hope, as soon as I learned from the public papers that his remains were to arrive here on Sunday, and that the obeequies of his soul were to be continued for four days 1 resolved to be among the foremost of those who loved and wishled to hononr him, and, accordingly postpouing other engagemeuts which I am never accustoned to deiay, I came to Dublin last Friday in order to have myself ready for taking my place in whatever way I could show my attachment, and love, and venerat.on, for him. In that hope I have been sadly cisappointed. Some of my old infirmities have fallen upon me with such presture latterly, that they render me unable, cven when I'nost wish it, to execute what formerly would have jeen quite easy ; and since I arrived here, notwithstanding the kindest aitention of affectionate friends, and every effort ou my own past, 1 have been constantly confued by one of those troublesome causps and have been warned by cmincat physicians not
