

If anybody will come out, man-fashion, and say what I'm supposed to have said, and when, and where, I'll answer him. But I don't propose to waste my time on this other kind of thing. Luckily, my chief backs me fully. One by-product of the affair may be that I'll have to refuse invitations to write or speak; which would be just as well. But it's a poor reason.

I enjoyed the last batch of correspondence with Nye. Saucy specimen, isn't he? When I get copies made of my revised article on "Dominion", I must send him one, à propos of his "The New Dominion". I shall send you anything I get in reply.

I have no prospect of being in Toronto before May 4, but expect to drop in on you then. Meanwhile, please forgive my long silence, and the silence which may well follow (as I have several urgent official jobs to do, and my Sorbonne College exam. papers to mark). Forgive also this scrawl. I don't want to type, for fear of waking the family. My best to Mrs. Meighen.

Yours sincerely,
Eugene
