

of the earlier English editions—has been remedied by inserting all the words in their order under one alphabet. Great pains have also been taken to ensure typographical accuracy.

Thus improved, it is presented to the public, in the hope and belief that it will be found an agreeable and valuable assistant in obtaining the key to a literature second to none in Europe, and one which numbers among its contributors men who would do honor to any age or country.

New-York, December, 1846.