CURIOUS RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS IN ARMENIA.

Very quaint and curious are the Christian customs of the East. There is such a spirit of conservatism among the Orientals, particularly among those who live in and about the Holy Land, that we may well believe that what we witness there to-day has been the traditional custom for ages, and in all probability has its origin away back at the source of the great stream of Christianity. Bishop Paul, of Tar-sus, describes in the Catholic World Magazine for July the religious customs of the present day among his own people, and in reading about them we led to believe that we are living in the ninth rather than in the nineteenth He describes the curious becentury. trothal and marriage ceremonies and funeral customs. ### MEXICO.

Our readers will remember that the Methodist Bishop McLaren published some time ago an account of a jaunt to Mexico. He certainly endeavored to avoid the methods of the ordinary clerical tourist, and his article, we must say, whilst not entitled to unqualified approval, was unmarred by the crass stupidity and anti Catholic hostility of the ordinary Protestant production. He had, of course, something to say anent the superstitions of the Mexicans, and was surprised at some things which he could not understand, just as a Mexican would be were he to hear the sighing and groaning, the whin ing and howling of the revival or camp meeting. But is it not strange that a gentleman of culture presumably should venture to write of questions of which he is as ignorant as that immortal individual of Chicago who told a wondering public that Cardinal Satolli wore a tonsure on his shoulder and a thurifer on his head. Writing from Mexico Dr. Estragues assures the Bishop that there are in England and the United States three times more absurd superstitions than in Mexico. We think the Bishop will, after a little observation, statement. In the United States and in our own fair land any loquacious fakir can be depended upon to make a decent living. As a clairvoyant or telepathist or expounder of inanitieshe can always find some gullible and interested auditors. The Latin races may be deficient in material resources, but they are, in some things, at least, not such picturesque lunatics as their Anglo Saxon brethren.

ens of Bathurst left nothing undone The citizens of painties list notifies duration to show that they highly appreciated the visit of such a distinguished visitor as the represen-tative of our Holy Father. The decorations all along the line of march were very elabor-ate and gave evidence of the deep atta-hment of the Catholic population of this section of the province to their religion and the head of the Church.

or the Canone population of this section of the Church. At the I. C. R. station a handsome arch, with appropriate motioes and decorated with Brit-ish and Papal colors, spanned the street, and from this point along the streets of the village, across the bridge to the town, a distance of nearly two miles, on eitherside were to be seen decorations of spruce and bunting. As the visitors entered the town another very large arch spanned the street in front of the post office, which bore the motio "Bienvenu.," The procession continued along Water street to King street and to the handsome granite Church of the Sacred Heart, where, immedi-ately opposite the residence of Bishop Barry, another arch had to be passed under. This arch was surmounted by a large cross, and was profusely decorated with British, French and Papal faga. Across the front of thes arch was the word." Welcome." Streamers of flags were stretched from the presbytery to the church and to the school lately erected for the Sisters of Charity. The handsome decorations on the veranda of the presbytery and through-out the church grounds were very attractive, and brought forth many expressions of admir-ation, especially from the visiting clergy and His Excellency. On his arrival at the presbytery His Excel-lency was escorted to the church by the clergy, attar boys and C. M. B.A., where the follow-ing address of welcome was read by the Rev. W, Varilly: To His Excellency the Most Reverend Diomede Falconio, Archishep of Larissa, Anostonie

IRELAND vs. SCOTLAND.

Some one wants to know why Ire land has not been so prosperous Scotland. Material prosperity arg mentagain ! Now, our brethren wou ascribe Scotland's material advance the "open Bible " and Ireland's pover to the fact that it has been a price ridden country, and to various oth things that do duty on second rate le ture platforms. The right answe however, can be found by reading t history of the two countries.

Scotland lost nothing by beco ing a portion of the British E pire. It was not overrun by la less soldiery, nor were the lan filched from their lawful owne With her own laws to guide her s with every encouragement given education and commerce, it is not ficult to assign the cause of her p gress. She was handicapped for a t by John'Knox and his pillaging fians, twho, as Wesley said, did devil's work, but they happily w not immortal.

With respect to Ireland one is prised that she is on the map of world. Beginning with the last st made by the Irish for that unspeak Stuart, Ireland's history is but a cord of blocd and oppression. T
