THE MASON & RISCH THE ROYAL PIANO LISTEN TO THE VOICE FROM WINDSOR CASTLE

1886 It is well known that during the memorable "Colonial and Indian" Exhibition held in London, in 1886, the Mason & Risch Piano Company were honored with instructions to send one of their Upright Pianos (then on exhibition), to Her Majesty the Queen at Windsor Castle.

1899 In 1899, the Kaiser William, of Germany, was the guest of Her Majesty at Windsor Castle. The Art and Society Paper, "The Sketch," thus refers to the apartments in the Castle assigned to the Emperor's use: "The beautiful suite of rooms, occupied by the Emperor, is known as the 'Tapestry Suite,' and is exclusively reserved for the use of foreign sovereigns."

"In the sitting-room stands the Prize Piano, shown at the last 'Colonial and Indian' Exhibition, made by Mason & Risch, of Toronto, Canada."

When it is remembered that the Emperor William is an excellent Musician, and is, moreover, a most fastidious musical critic, it can be confidently assumed that no instrument could be assigned for his use unless possessing exceptionally fine tonal and other qualities.

When it is further remembered that there are numerous pianos in Windsor Castle to choose from, by the world's most eminent makers, it is no slight honor and distinction for this Canadian instrument to have been detailed for so important and distinguished a position.

1913 And the Mason & Risch is now a better made, a better toned, a better known and a better appreciated piano than ever.

We shall be glad to talk over the Mason & Risch Piano with you—either personally or by mail. We want to tell you why the Mason & Risch is such a favorite with those who "know" a good piano.

Dry Rot of Potato

A new Disease in Nebraska Worth Knowing About in Canada

The Nebraska Experiment Station has just issued Bulletin 134, on "A Dry Rot of the Irish Potato Tuber." For several years the Department of Agricultural Botany has been engaged in a study of Irish potato diseases in Nebraska. Among these the dry rot of the tuber is one of the most important. Buyers and commission men have reported losses, during storage, of from 20 to 60 per cent due to this dry rot. In fact the most important feature of this dry rot is the fact that it forces the immediate sale of the crop as soon as dug. This tends to demoralize the market and places the grower at the mercy of the buyers, since he is himself afraid to store his crop and wait for better prices.

SYMPTOMS The dry rot here described is a strict tuber rot affecting mature tubers only. Neither the stems nor the young tubers are ordinarily in the least affected. Natural infection is known to occur solely through wounds produced in the process of digging or subsequent handling. In many cases this rot secured a foothold through wounds produced in scab-producing animals of certain sorts and perhaps even through scab due to fungus parasitism, though the latter method is certainly very rare if we may judge from the laboratory experiments.

The rotting is rather slow, and in general within four or six weeks from one-third to three-fourths of the tuber is destroyed. The epidermis of the rotted portion becomes slightly wrinkled and usually has a characteristic bluish color. On account of the rapid destruction of the underlying tissues the surface over these areas soon becomes distinctly depressed.

CAUSE Numerous inoculation experiments have shown that this dry rot is caused by a parasitic fungus, not previously described; for which we have proposed the name Fusarium tuberivorum. At the same time it has also been demonstrated that this dry rot fungus does not cause the injury to the leaves and stems often referred to as "blight" or "wilt."

In other words, the present dry rot of the tuber is not connected in any manner with diseased conditions of other parts of the plant.

METHODS OF CONTROL

Extensive experiments have been conducted to learn if any treatment might be applied before the potatoes were stored that would reduce the amount of rotting.

These experiments have clearly demonstrated that dry rot may be held in check through treatment of the tubers before being placed in the storage cellars. For this purpose the best results were secured through the use of either formalin dip, formalin-vapor, or the lime-sulphur wash. Not only did the tubers in these lots show a very small percentage of dry rot, but they were in excellent condition otherwise when removed in April. The storage time, it should be remembered, employed in this experiment is longer than would ordinarily be employed by the average farmer and this gave the treatments a severe test. Under ordinary farm conditions the development of the formalin vapors is not easily secured, and therefore we would particularly recommend the use of the formalin dip as the easiest method to employ and one that should give excellent results in practice.

Whooping cough is not dangerous when the cough is kept loose and expectoration easy by giving Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It has been used in many epidemics of this disease with perfect success. For sale by Druggists & Dealers.
