The Rose and Lily Dagger A TALE OF WOMAN'S LOVE AND WOMAN'S PERFDY

He found himself borne toward the door, and out into the open air; a free man. The court cleared as if by magic, and three men alone remained—the sergeant, Saunders and Gerald.

CHAPTER XXXVIII. The marquis, still surrounded by the excited crowd, found himself outside the court, in the dark night, and the light from the lamps that entered the building fell gloriously upon his haggard face.

As they drove away, the marquis saw Elaine and the major pass them in Mr. Bradley's brougham, and with a long breath he fell back.

Not a word passed between the two men during the homeward drive; but now and again the marquis touched the marquis's arm timidly, as if to assure himself that his beloved friend and protector was really there, safe and out of danger.

WIND COLIC. "In my opinion," writes Mrs. Philip Collins, of Bartlettville, Que., "there is no medicine so equal as Baby's Own Tablets."

All children who have used Baby's Own Tablets speak just as highly of them as does Mrs. Collins. The Tablets cure all the little ills from which infants and young children suffer, and the mother has a solemn assurance that this medicine is entirely free from any harmful or hurtful ingredients.

AT DEATH'S DOOR. The Story of the Recovery of Miss Falford, of St. Elie.

She says "I am confident that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life"—Hope for all Weak, Sickly Girls.

To be well, to be strong, to possess a clear complexion, bright eyes and a steady step, the blood must be pure and well-circulating energy. When you see pale, sallow, sickly girls, easily tired, subject to headaches, backaches and violent palpitation of the heart, it is the blood that is at fault, and unless the trouble is speedily corrected the patient passes into that condition known as "decline," and death follows.

"Rest! A laugh of self-scorn and loathing broke from the dry lips. 'Rest! Do you think I should let my pale face say the least distinctly if I closed my eyes? No, it is burnt into my heart.'

"And you think that she has forgotten that you risked your life to save even her from the shadow of suspicion?" murmured Lady Scott, the tears rolling down her cheeks.

"How noble she looked," he murmured, as if communing with himself. "There is none like her, none! And yet, in my brutish folly, I flung that sword at her, and she was left to me, I am not worthy of her, my angel! And I am rightly punished; she, she, how she has suffered! He hid his face and sank into a low chair."

"The marquis rose and looked at him, not sternly, not resentfully, but with cold displeasure. 'I beg pardon for this intrusion, my lord,' said Saunders, evidently struggling hard for breath and composure. 'But—something has happened, and—for God's sake, come at once!'

"Something has happened?" the marquis said, starting. "Elaine! Miss DeLaine?" "No, no, my lord," responded Saunders quickly. "But we have found her! Fanny Inchley!"

"The marquis frowned. 'Well, what is that to me?' he demanded. 'Saunders seemed staggered and repulsed, but only for a moment. 'My lord, it is of the greatest importance to you—to every one!' he dared not say Miss DeLaine. 'We—my man, Brown, has been looking for her everywhere, and has only just found her. For heaven's sake, come at once! The whole mystery can be cleared up! But she will not speak until you come, and—'

CHAPTER XXXIX. Saunders led the way to the bridge. As they neared it Luigi heard voices speaking in suppressed tones, and the grasp of the marquis's arm tightened nervously.

THE NORTHWEST BUTTER

How the Creameries Help the Pioneer Farmer.

THE COLLECTING OF EGGS

Department of Agriculture, Commissioner's Branch. Ottawa, Oct. 25, 1903. Owing to the necessity of breaking the new land, the lack of capital and the distance from markets, many settlers in the Northwest naturally find the first few years rather trying.

The changes of the past few years have altered the aspect of farming in many parts of the Northwest. Last year the Government creameries were exported to Great Britain, one carload was sold for export to Queensland, Australia, and the remainder was disposed of in local and British Columbia markets.

Up to Oct. 1st of this year, the output of butter from the Government creameries exceeded that of last year by 100,000 pounds. The increase has been mainly in Alberta. This year all the butter has been taken by the farmers of the Territories and none have been shipped to Great Britain.

The butter from the Government creameries has already been secured by the department in that country as a direct result of that exhibition. The trade in butter for the Orient is for the European residents in the Orient and not for natives, and Mr. J. A. Ruddle, Chief of the Dairy Division, hopes also to develop an extensive trade with the warships of the Orient.

HEALTH AND VIGOR FOR SICKLY WOMEN. By Supplying an Abundance of Rich, Red, Life-Sustaining and System-Building Blood, DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Thoroughly Cures the Ills Peculiar to Women. The feminine organism is an intricate mass of delicate and sensitive nerves, which require an enormous amount of pure, rich blood to nourish them and supply them with the vital force necessary to properly perform their functions.

When the blood is lacking in quantity or quality the nerve cells waste and shrivel up and by means of pain and irregularities make known their starved and depleted condition. Unless the nervous system is put in proper condition all the medicine in the world will never cure the weakness and irregularities peculiar to women.

Calgary. There all the eggs are examined and classified by an expert, who has the egg lists in front of him, and every farmer is credited with the exact number of each class of eggs he has sent. The department advances 15 cents per dozen on the eggs at the time they are received, and later the farmer gets the balance according to the classification. This year the average price to the farmer will be just about twenty cents per dozen for the season, or fully double what could have been obtained locally. About 60,000 dozen will be handled. Last year 21,000 dozen were handled, and the town of Calgary consumed them all. Shipping first-class eggs greatly increases consumption, and it will be some time before this trade can possibly be crowded, because there is a market in the Kootenay and an ever growing market in the Northwest Territories. Yours very truly, W. A. Clemons, Publication Clerk.

HECTOR'S VINDICATION.

What Punishment Should be Given to Men Who Defamed Him? New York News: Sir Hector Macdonald was one of England's best and bravest soldiers, the idol of men in the ranks and the envy of all the snobs and incompetents wearing the King's uniform. He fought his way to the top and won by force of character, bravery and daring; and ability, honor and fame beyond the reach of those who hold commissions by purchase or favor of caste.

Accusations of unspeakable crime were made against the hero while he was serving his country in the Far East, and when he came home to face his cowardly accusers he found that their monstrous charges were believed by those who should have been his prompt defenders. He had faced death a thousand times, and he feared it less than anything else in the world. Death to him was but a detail of the day's work, and the least of all evils which could befall a soldier. So he turned his back in contempt on the whole pestiferous pack, placed his hand in Death's, and said: "Come, old comrade, let us go."

And all the world said that Hector Macdonald's suicide was confession of guilt—the whole being a pitiful fool and given to thinking evil as sparks fly upward. The charges against Hector Macdonald have been investigated by a government commission in Ceylon, and the six members unanimously declare on oath that "there is not the slightest particle of truth or foundation in any of the accusations; that the slanders were prompted by feelings of spite and envy, and that Sir Hector Macdonald was assassinated by vile and slanderous tongues."

The pity of it all is that the hero's moral courage was not equal to his physical bravery, or that he did not care enough for reputation to live and fight for it. The victory that he could and would have won over the coward crew of slanderers would have been a greater, more glorious triumph than any feat of arms ever performed on earth.

But the commission, which acquits the dead soldier, and "deplores the sad circumstances of the case," will fall miserably short of its duty if it fails to bring to justice the murderers of Sir Hector Macdonald. Not even the most potent influence in the British Empire should be permitted to save the assassins from being washed around the world with the scorpion whips of all honest men's execration.
