HER MAJESTY

By Zoe A. Hutchings

Copyright, 1902, by Z. A. Hutchings

The prime minister mopped his forehead and the duchess dried her eyes. They had just been through a trying ordeal with her majesty the queen, who "would not marry the Duke of Corray, state reasons or no state reasons." The minister and the duchess, the young queen's mother, had yielded and had sent her highness, triumphant, into the garden, to make her proposal to her favored subject, the Earl of Norwood.

Queen Marie wandered along the garden paths until she espied Lord Norwood, and then she began plucking roses in embarrassment at his approach.

"Ah, my queen!" he said, bending his knee and pressing her hand to his lips. "You will hurt these tender hands with the cruel thorns. I shall break the roses for you."

"I have to tell you something," she said, with averted eyes.

"Do you really care? Have they consented? Oh, my queen, I never dared hope!"

"Consented to what, pray?" she said coldly. "I haven't told you anything."

"No," he stammered. They walked on in silence between the rows of blooming azalea bushes. Suddenly she said, with an impatient movement of her hands:

"I wish I were a dairymaid."

"Why, your majesty?" he exclaimed, stopping short in amazement.

"Yes; I wish I were a dairymaid," she continued, "and I should be milking a good old cow, and then the farmer's lad would chance along, and he would look at me as if he were not afraid of me, and he would say: 'Oh, Marie—I mean, 'Oh, Tilly—I love you better than my wealth, better than my title—I mean, 'better than—than my plow. Will you be my wife? And I would say—I might say, 'Yes, if—if he would beg hard enough.'"

"Would you say that?" Lord Norwood cried eagerly, seizing her hand. Then, remembering, he dropped it. "I wish I were a farmer's lad!" he muttered impatiently. After an embarrassing pause, "You see, your majesty, we are slaves to custom, slaves to a sometimes annoying and severe master called etiquette and ceremony, and more abject slaves to our own miserable cowardice."

"Now, you will have to yield me the victory in the argument we had last night!" she said gleefully. "Concede!"

"YOUR HUMBLE SERVANT AWAITS YOUR PLEASURE," HE ANSWERED.

that I was right when I said that people in humble life are happier than we of pomp and ceremony. At last you will have to say that I am right and you are wrong." And she laughed triumphantly, clapping her hands and peering him with azalea blossoms. "Say you are wrong quickly!" she ordered, seizing the sword from his scabbard and holding it above his head. "No; I will not say it, not even to my queen," he answered, fascinated by her change of humor.

"What! Will not acknowledge you are in the wrong? Oh, he!"

"But I'm not in the wrong. It is the way in which we look at things whether our environments need order or our happiness or not."

"Ah, you are cornered! Did you not say a moment ago that we are the slaves of custom, which amounts to the same thing?"

"Well, then, we'll set custom aside," he said, a trifle piqued at being caught. "We'll suppose you to be a dairymaid, for you know you really are no better, being a mortal and only elevated by—well, say by the chance of custom."

"Indeed!" she said icily, tossing her head. "If so you consider me, we may as well discontinue any further acquaintance." And she turned about and walked toward the castle. He was not prepared for this development and was for a moment too stunned to do anything but stare after her. Recovering himself, he sprang to her side.

"Your majesty," he cried, "forgive me! I did not think—I would not have vexed you for the world. It was only for the sake of argument, you know."

"Then any you have lost the argument," she said petulantly.

"No, I haven't lost it, because you would not hear me out."

THE "SANKERO."

Unhappy Lot of a Peculiar Figure of the Irrigation Country.

An eastern farmer coming to an irrigated valley finds everything as different from his accustomed life as he can well imagine. He must learn an entirely new language of farming and a new set of farming rules. His neighbor greets him, not with the remark, "it looks like rain," but "Have you heard when the water is coming in?" or "The ditches are low today." He learns to speak of miners' inches and acre feet of water, and he can soon tell at a glance whether a ditch is carrying 50 or 100 miners' inches of water. He hears wise discussions of headgates, weirs, laterals and canals. He finds that he is "under" a certain canal, which by and by will come to seem to him like an inexorable fate.

He will very promptly make the acquaintance of the king of the irrigated land, the zanjero, in Arizona called "sankero," in California sometimes shortened to "sanky," the water master or ditch rider, a bronzed man in overalls and sombrero, who drives about in a two wheeled cart, with a shovel and a long crooked lined fork by his side things, all huddled up in a bunch, are utterly miserable and make you weak. Sink your feet in cold water—not ice cold, but coolish. Warm water draws the blood into the feet. You wish to reduce the inflammation and fever by driving it away. The chiropodists say there is nothing like cold water for sore, tired feet. Cold water, besides, toughens the skin rather than makes it softer.

After you have brushed your pedal extremities with a stiff brush, cool moline then comes into play, to be well rubbed into the callouses and joints. With this sort of treatment your feet are kept in such good condition that they are a positive joy, and that, you know, is worth living for.

For Harsh Hair.

For hair that is dry and harsh there is no better lotion than that given by Dr. Erasmus Wilson. Here is the formula:

Eau de Cologne, eight ounces; tincture of cantharides, one ounce; oil of English lavender, one-half dram; oil of rosemary, one-half dram.

Rub this into the hair at night two or three times a week until the hair begins to revive under the treatment. After that do not use it oftener than once in two weeks.

For dandruff there is nothing which can quite equal an egg shampoo. It is made in this fashion:

Yolk of one egg, one pint of rainwater, one ounce of rosemary spirit.

Beat the mixture thoroughly and use it warm, rubbing well into the scalp. After it has dried shampoo the hair with soap shampoo and warm water.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Headache.

Pain across the forehead or at back of head is dangerous. It slowly but surely weakens the intellectual powers, impairs the vitality and will. Headache is sometimes from the eyes but more frequently is caused by a disordered condition of the stomach and digestive organs. Do not suffer. The pain can be cured by the harmless remedy

Abbey's Effervescent Salt

It never loses its effect. Cures by driving out the poison, and does not simply deaden the pain as do so many preparations containing narcotics.

Abbey's in the morning will make you well and keep you well.

A WORK APRON.

One That is a Real Help to the Busy Housekeeper.

Work aprons like the one shown in the accompanying illustration are easy to make and are a wonderful help to a busy woman around the house. The diagram shows how the material should be cut. For the apron pictured here you will need three-fourths of a yard of gingham and one-fourth of a yard of calico for binding. Bind the pocket first on the sides, then baste it to the apron at the bottom from the lower edge of the binding and bind around from the top of the apron to the top on the opposite side. Put a belt at the top as you would an apron, with ends long enough to tie around the waist. With a graduated ruffle sewed around the bottom instead of the binding it makes a handy work apron for knitting and crocheting. As the apron could be hung up with the work left in ready for service when needed. It could be made of any kind of wash goods desired. It was designed especially for clothespins.—Woman's Home Companion.

Wear the softest slippers always in the house. To wear a street shoe after you come inside your front door is to imprison your foot so much longer, and the more it is exposed to light and air the healthier and more comfortable it will be. Patent leathers are ruinous to the feet, especially when they are built with high heels and narrow toes. The feet perspire, the heat throws the weight on the toes, and the poor little things, all huddled up in a bunch, are utterly miserable and make you weak. Sink your feet in cold water—not ice cold, but coolish. Warm water draws the blood into the feet. You wish to reduce the inflammation and fever by driving it away. The chiropodists say there is nothing like cold water for sore, tired feet. Cold water, besides, toughens the skin rather than makes it softer.

An Expert in Counterfeits.

Miss Lillie Burns, for over twenty-nine years a treasury employee, is a famous and efficient governmental attaché. So expert in the detecting of counterfeit money has she become that her dictum is regarded as final authority in such matters, and she has been sent nearly all over America upon private business connected with the treasury department, and withal Miss Burns is quite sufficiently girlish, attractive and witty to be known as a veritable and charming bachelor girl without the slightest undue distention of the truth.

The Rubber Thimble.

The rubber thimble which protects the forefinger of the left hand in sewing, says one woman, is a real friend to me, for I was perpetually sewing into the skin, and not only spoiled the appearance of the finger, but made it rather sore. It took time for me to get used to the kid covering which I first used and the rubber one which succeeded it, but I persevered and finally reached the point where I did not mind it.

Mattress Filling.

Excelsior ranks well for a mattress filling and, if made up with cotton, is comfortable; but, as cotton is a strong absorbent and apt to retain the exhalations of the body, it cannot be recommended from a sanitary standpoint.
