

and made fun of you after. But I will tell you what I do to get down and see them.

JANEZ.—But wouldn't that be nearly as bad? Of course I did not abuse Tilley so much as I did Sir John, but he belongs to the same party, don't he?

D. G.—Of course he does, but you go down and see him, and you will see that you are a great admirer of him, and that you are a great admirer of the Government.

JANEZ.—(interrupting)—But what if he hears about the Flanagan case and the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie being on my side? And you know, Smith, if anything comes out about the liquor traffic, and these fellows on the Richmond Road, and—

D. G.—(hastily)—Yes, but Tilley knows nothing about that, and that Peter Keary is a perfectly honest man, and that Keary and Clowry are on his side; that's all.

JANEZ.—(doubtfully)—Yes, that's good enough, but don't you think Tilley will be able to get up a list of names of those who are against Tilley in some of his speeches; you know I used to read those notes that you and Andy used to give me, and you know anything against Tilley? (beseechingly) now think well, Smith.

D. G.—No! 'pon my soul you never did. Anyway, it is the only thing you can do now. Get on Tilley, and you will see that you can see you must and you will see that Tilley, O! how does Tilley feel about the Chatham Branch affair? Don't you know that twenty-one hundred dollars from the Dominion Gov't? How was it that Mackenzie allowed it to appear in the Public Accounts did you tell me that it was to be charged to the Secret Service?

JANEZ.—Yes, I thought it was too! I never was so surprised as when the Gleason published it. I thought Mackenzie would have managed it. I thought he would have made some improvements on the Branch, you know I am getting a little better, but on this one I don't see how you can go on and you speak to the ladies; it is to go down and see Tilley, you know it would look better?

D. G.—Yes, I'll see Bogo and Andy about going round with a petition from the party. (Exit Janez.)

D. G.—(sobs) Well by—this is a bad mess. I know I had only said nothing about Sir John and come out independent we would have been all right, but I can't say a word because I was advised him to go so hard for the public. Just to think I have bonded Wye will get back his old office and all his friends in the Overseers and Wardens and the worst of it is I can't expect Snowball to keep the paper going, unless he gets a chance with Tilley all the money from both governments will be withdrawn. I don't think he has any prospect of success with Tilley but I don't see how I can do the odds if I don't make a holy show of myself by offering himself as the Gov't's martyr, as long as I believe in the German motto "sell the man." Of course if Tilley does by any means consent to take Snowball on they will never allow him to go down and see Tilley, you know it would look better?

D. G.—(To be continued.)

Yes, but the fact can scarcely be realized. So suddenly did that great visitant,—death—enter the household and snatch from the midst of an affectionate mother and loving brothers and sisters, a brother of amiable qualities, that it can scarcely be thought, that he has been called with such suddenness to dwell, I trust, with saint above.

On Saturday evening, the 19th inst., Mr. Newcomb Wilson, brother of his late wife, surrounded by every of the family circle and a few friends.

His sickness, inflammation of the bowels, must have been a most virulent character; for after two days suffering he was called away. His memory will long be cherished by all who knew and relate to him from his family attachments and endearments was known by his playmates as a boy against whom nothing disparaging could be said. Reverent in intellect, power, he will be remembered none the less by all his school-mates. Ever ready to take an active part in every good cause, he will be remembered by more elderly members of the community.

Bright, intelligent, unobtrusive and unassuming he was an agreeable companion at home and abroad. His conversational manner was admired by all. Keely fond of book-lore, his knowledge of matters generally would astonish older heads than mine. The writer, though acquainted with the youth only a few short years, must bear testimony to his sterling worth and abilities. Had he been spared, he most certainly would have been one of Derby's brightest men. Possessed of a fine and relative memory he was always known to be a "bright boy." But how soon and unexpectedly are our hopes frustrated. He who was about to depart for the Sackville Institution was called away by him who bestowed all good things upon man. Thus he unto whom were given talents and faculties of a high order, was not permitted to live the three score years and ten, but in his nineteenth year was beckoned away by his omnipotent Ruler, which governeth all things wisely and well.

It is seldom a death occurs which creates such profound sympathy. Even the most elderly shed tears, and his youthful companions feel, most pathetically, the loss they have sustained. His connection with the "Division," will also be remembered. All ways one of the foremost to entertain the members while in session, they too, deplore their loss. But we rejoice to know that he had hopes of a glorious resurrection; and both family and friends must be comforted when they remember that he who raised Lazarus from the dead can also raise up our departed friend, Newton Wilson, to mansions in the sky. His funeral took place this afternoon, attended by a large circle of relations and friends, accompanied by the members of the Division, dressed in their appropriate regalia.

NO AGENTS! NO COMMISSION!
THE system of employing Agents or Commissionaries at a high commission has been entirely abandoned by us, having proved very unsatisfactory both to ourselves and customers. In future we will sell our direct to purchasers. In this way buyers of Pianos and Organs will save from twenty to forty per cent. by dealing directly with us, and, moreover, far better satisfaction can be guaranteed.
We claim to sell the best Instruments to be had, and at the lowest prices consistent with first class articles.
The cash system enables us to sell at a very small advance on cost of manufacture although to honest and reliable parties we do not object to allow a reasonable time for payments.
Parties ordering by mail can rely upon getting as fine an instrument as if personally selected by themselves. Any Organ or Piano not found exactly as represented can be returned at our expense. We refer with pleasure to over Fifteen Hundred Pianos and Organs sold by us the last year.
Thankful for the very liberal patronage accorded us hitherto, we can only say that we will continue our endeavors to thoroughly satisfy our customers in all their dealings with us.
