ausband in the world than I. I say this in no boasting spirit, but merely to reiterate a fact that my wife would have realized long ago if it had been her misfortune to have married some other man. In our quiet little neighborhood on the south side there is no phrase that better conveys the ultimate of stant use, "As good natured as Mr. Bine." Now, I repeat, this reference to my well known and most admired characteristic is not made in a spirit of self exultation, for I am about to chronicle its downfall—temporary downfall, I hasten to add and also to remark that perhaps my wife is more to blame in the matter than I am. I have heard that several persons have wondered how I manage to get along so nicely with Constance. Well, perhaps I do deserve a great deal of credit, though I should be the last person in the world to assert this. It would not be unfair to myself to state that Constance, though she admits she is only 32 years old, does not look a day over 28, and she still retains the major portion of the piquant attractiveness that made her a belle in her young lady days and won me at first sight. So, your husband. He got his left hand after all, it may be true that I am very tle poured the remainder of my "Old lenient toward her because she is still Uabinet," into a glass, corked the flask very pretty and still reminds me of her and fired it in a direction from which Mrs. Gemmer—Why, that's the fla-ger he wore his diamond ring on! He can't wear it any more. Wonder if he smarter than I am. I won't deny this. She reads the daily papers—I mean not have been surprised if I had sunk even reads outside the society page— part of the street. > However, this story of how I was surprised into an expression of annoy-ance—perhaps I should say irritation is what I wish to tell, that the truth of it may be known. Constance says I displayed anger, but then she is a great ease. It was midnight to the stroke of the courthouse clock. Then they began: Meeeeeeee - ow - o-o-w-o-o-wow-miaou! Szzzskkkkkkkk - eeeeeee - miaou-riaou-rrrrr-purrrr! Wow!!! Wew!! Wow!!

My hair, in standing on ends, had pulled me to a sitting posture. It took several minutes to catch my breath. I am sure if I had not been an expert diver when I was a bey, I would have expired now of suffocation. Then came again that horrible interchange of dis-sonance. It is needless to repeat the suggestions that are used to indicate the sputterings and ear scalding feline anathemas. The noise seemed to come from under the bed; in reality the wretches were just out of throwing distance. I glanced at Constance. She lay quietly sleeping, looking not unlike a reposing queen with her aureole of curl papers. Again came those scarifying screeches. How Constance can sleep She slowly turned half over, and still not awake, touched me and managed to murmur, "Stop snoring, Mr. Bine." Really, that must have been the first thing that influenced me in the direction of losing my temper. Stop snoring!

As if I ever snored. And it was not the first time Constance had accused me of moring. I can take a joke as well as any one, but when Constance accuses me of such undignified proceedings I sonfess it does not move me to geniality. Then the cats began again, and stance, awakening to the situation, sat up and stammered out feebly, "Shoo." Then she turned to me and said, sleepily:

"For goodness sake, go to sleep. Don't let a little noise like that worry She instantly followed her own adice, and I may say here positively that f I do sucre I have no reason to feel me 15 minutes to hear and 15 minutes more to locate. I lit the gas and started on a search for the mouse. Then it was that Constance forged to the front as a military dictator. She could give Shafter miles and then beat him. Huddled up in the middle of the bed she conducted the campaign, leaving me to go to the front and get inte the hot of battle. Spaniards are like getting money from home in comparison to catching a mouse. "Oh, he's eating up that edition de luxe of the 'Three Musketeers' that you gave me when we were engaged," equealed Constance.

Now as that edition de luxe she mentioned consists of two volumes that weigh about three pounds each, and as there is arsenic in the green binding, I didn't worry about it, but I went to the bookshelves, pulled back the curtains, gave a shove or two on the bottom shelf and out jumped one of the most ferocious mice I ever saw. I jumped to meet him, and we rolled over on the floor together, but in the melee he escaped. Constance says I was trying to get away from the little beast. Well, if I was I didn't succeed, for it was all I could do to keep from screaming when in its reciprocated excitement it touch ed me with at least two dozen cold, scratchy, little feet.

I was starting back for headquarters when Constance began to execute a series of fantastic gestures. She waved her arms appealingly and pointed at the curtain over the door to her writing room. Then she pointed at the mantelpiece. I promptly turned out the gas and secured my pistol.
"Oh, Mr. Bine! Why can't you understand?" she finally said. Now I could have said something cruel there, but I refrained. I was not reared on a Comanche reservation, and I have no Apache blood in me. I lit the gas again, disarmed myself, secured the broom my wife had gesticulated at and ambushed myself behind the foot of the bed, to watch for any commotion that might indicate the whereabouts of the wily mouse. The curtain, which cf some flimsy stuff—crinoline or liste thread silk—began to flutter again. "Deploy," said Constance

"You don't deplore this half as much "That is a military phrase," said Constance haughtily. "Enfilade him," she added aggravatingly. It was plain Constance was trying to enrage me. It is likely I was a little ashamed of myself. What a boon to many a man or woman if this were literally so—How many spirits are bretsen because this particular organ is shackled by disease—and yet how many times has Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart brushed against the grim reaper and robbed him of his victim. Diseases of the heart are by far the most treacherous of ailments which afflict hum suffers violence. Discussing causes here will not console the suffering one. The one great years of the heart-sickened patient is how to get relief and a cure. Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart stands pre-eminently to-day as the star of hope to sufferers from heart trouble, and so far past the experimental period that thousands to-day proclaim, in no uncertain sound, the belief that were it not for this great remedy they world have long ago passed into the great beyond.

Most eminent doctors, whom heart cases have baffled, have tested Dr. Agnew's claims, and to-day they prescribe it in their practice as the quickest and safest heart remedy known to medical science. What are the symptoms? Palpitation, flut-tering, shortness of breath, weak and irregular pulse, swelling of feet and ankles, pain in the left side, chilly sensations, fainting spells, uneasiness in sleeping, dropsical tendency and as many re indications that the heart is deranged. Dr. Agner's Cure for the Heart is a heart specific; and no case too acute to find relief from it inside of thirty minutes—a powerful cure.

CONDUCTOR WILLIAM G. LUCAS, of the N. & W.R.R., and living at Hagarstown, Md., suffered for years with acute valvular form of heart disease—cost him many a "lay off" from his daily duties on the road, and he spent a small fortune in remedies and treating with heart, and all ended in disappointment, until a good friend, who had been was Cure for the Heart.
