THE CROWN PRINCE.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Swash."
No resident of Europe excites more interest in the feverish reader of the daily war news than the Crown Prince of Germany, who will some day be called upon to rule either Europe and large sections of China or the fifth ward of Potsdam—depending upon circumstances which have been happening in great profusion since last August.

Unfortunately, the hurried correspondents who have been taking notes upon the present hostilities have not had time to compile a biography and description of the Crown Prince for the benefit of his many friends and supporters in this country. Through a careful reading of newspaper articles and personal reading of magazine pictures we are now enabled to supply this deficiency and to turn a search light of information upon this eminent character.

The Crown Prince's undressed name is Frederick William. He is the son of Wm. Hohenzollern, a well known character on this planet, and was born in 1882. He was married in 1905 to Duchess Cecilie, and has three children, none of whom have as yet taken an active part in the war.

The Crown Prince is a tall, slender man with a good-natured face and a monastic appearance, suffering from mal-nutrition. He wears a long military coat with the two-acre skirt so popular in the German army circles and the typical German helmet provided at the top with a spike as a protection against falling aviators.

The Crown Prince is a great horseman, a scholar, a good sport and a tremendous soldier. During the present war he has led armies simultaneously in France and Poland and has been one of the few men in history who have suffered a disastrous defeat, won a brilliant victory, addressed the people from a palace window and passed away quietly in a field hospital, all on the same day.

The Crown Prince has led many brilliant field campaigns, but has also spent his entire time planning the war with a pair of callipers and a map in Berlin. He has been wounded seven times, five times in a vital place, has been captured four times and killed twice. He has also fallen from several aeroplanes and is at present chasing Russians and driving his father's automobile through the Rhine country.

Having read the war news faithfully for information regarding this remarkable character, we are not certain whether he is a man or a fraternal order, but present the above conditions piously and hope for the best.

ITALY'S REPLY TO AUSTRIA.
Rome, Jan. 17.—The Messaggero, commenting on articles appearing in the Austrian newspapers to the effect that Italy cannot rely on international aid, as at the time of the Messian earthquake, says, "The Government is prepared to put into practice the motto of the great King Victor Emmanuel, 'Italy is sufficient unto herself,' which, the paper adds, she may soon demonstrate on the field of honor and glory, when the moment comes to protect her rights."

The Features We Notice,

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

What features of the human face do you notice most?
I think the average person notices the eyes, which is not strange, for eyes are surely the most human, the most personal, the most alive part of the face. They are well called the windows of the soul, though the windows are sometimes soiled by the dust of selfishness and deceit or the curtains of conventionality.

Color is the thing many people notice about the eyes. I know a woman who can tell you what colored eyes her most casual acquaintance has. Speak of the appearance of someone with whom she exchanged a dozen formal words of introduction and never met again and she will say, "What nice gray eyes he has!"

What Color Are Your Best Friend's Eyes?

It would seem as though even an unobserving person would know the color of his intimate friends' eyes, yet people are often surprisingly misled by lashes and general coloring. For instance, I know a girl who has black hair, an olive skin and very black lashes. People who know her instinctively often speak of her "black hair and black eyes." Yet, as a matter of fact, she has light golden brown eyes and it is only the dark curtain before them and the inference of her general coloring which makes them seem black.

Eyelashes, by the way, often make eyes that are not at all pretty or distinctive in themselves appear out of the ordinary and one frequently hears people remark on a girl's pretty eyes when her eyes are really commonplace. What they actually mean, though they may not know it, is that she has thick curly eyelashes.

A Squint as a Beauty Mark.

The shape of the eyes and the way they are set are as distinctive and varying as their coloring. Eyes set close together are supposed to be a sign of a mean character, while eyes set apart denote selfishness. Slightly slanting eyes give a piquancy to the face that is often worth more than beauty to its possessor. Eyes with a slight squint in them are charming if one is to believe Hall Caine, who endows Glory Quayle with them, or Tolstol, who does the same for the heroine of "The Awakening."

The mouth is not so often noticed as the eyes but to me it is the most interesting, expressive feature of the face. Weakness or strength shows in every mouth. Sensuality or selfishness always betrays itself there, while sweetness of character, tenderness and sympathy mould the mouth into lines which, to me, are as beautiful as the finest pair of eyes.

The shape and setting of the ears, the line of the profile, the curve of the chin and throat, the sweep of the forehead and the general shape of the face are features which artists are more apt to notice than we common folks, but they are all interesting points and worth observing and studying. Incidentally, I think if we should learn to observe such things we should be surprised to find how many faces which we have thought utterly commonplace have some unobtrusively beautiful feature.

Byelashes, by the way, often make eyes that are not at all pretty or distinctive in themselves appear out of BATTLE OF ISANDULA: Rorke's Drift, 1878, when by the gallant defence by a small body of English soldiers, the Zulus were prevented from entering Natal, South Africa.

QUEEN VICTORIA died 1901, aged 82. Victoria the Good came to the throne of Great Britain in 1837, on the death of her uncle, William IV. She married Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg Gotha in 1840, and nine children were born of one of the happiest unions in history. Peace and prosperity evolved during her long and illustrious reign, and her statesmanship left an example that few men in a similar position can show.

BYRON born 1788. The poet, who exercised the greatest influence upon European thought during the early part of the 19th century. His "Child Harold's Pilgrimage," at once placed him in the front rank of poets and his many poems are full of passion, charm and beauty.

The heart will break, yet brokenly live on.—Byron.

TWO KINDS.

There are two kinds of people on earth today. Just two kinds of people, no more, I say.

Not the stunner and saint, for his will understand. The good are half bad and the bad are half good.

Not the rich and the poor, for, to count a man's wealth. You must first know the state of his conscience and health.

Not the humble and proud, for, in life's little span, Who puts on vain airs is not counted a man.

Not the happy and sad, for the swift flying years Bring each man his laughter and each man his tears.

No, the two kinds of people on earth is that "I" men. Are the people who lift and the people who lean.

Wherever you go you will find the world's masses Are always divided in just these two. And, oddly enough, you will find too, I ween There is only one lifted to twenty who lean.

In which class are you? Are you easing the load of overworked lifters who rest down the road? Or are you a leaner, who lets others bear Your portion of labor, and worry and care?—Henry P. Lyman-Wheaton.

MERCHANT SHIPS BUILT DURING THE PAST YEAR.

London, Jan. 13.—Although it is not possible to give the figures of the total tonnage of ships launched, at the various yards of Great Britain, during the year 1914, owing to the abolition of the Admiralty that no details of warships shall appear in the returns, figures available for mercantile ship building indicate that the amount of such tonnage launched is about 1,774,000 tons, or some 200,000 tons less than in 1913. Several yards on the East coast, where the Government building is carried on, show a decrease collectively of about 100,000 tons in the output of mercantile vessels. On the other hand several yards usually associated only with mercantile building have been engaged solely in Government work creating the belief that if Government tonnage could be included, the figures for the year would create a record.

BRITAIN ASKS HER WOMEN TO SEND THE MEN.

London, Jan. 13.—An appeal to the women of Great Britain to send their husbands and sons to join the Army is printed in all newspapers this morning. It is one of the recruiting advertisements by the War Office, which has been using the newspapers freely in its efforts to procure men that Kitchener wants. The appeal reads:

"Do you realize that the safety of your home and your children depends on our getting more men now? Do you realize that one word, 'go,' from you may send another man to fight for our King and country?"

"When the war is over and your husband or your son is asked: 'What did you do in the war?' is he to hang his head because you would not let him go?"

Sick, Sour Stomach, Indigestion or Gas

Take "Pape's Diapiesin" and in five minutes you'll wonder what became of misery in stomach.

Wonder what upset your stomach— which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn "lumpy" head dizziness and aches, belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapiesin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapiesin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapiesin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

OBJECT TO THE SPELLING OF THE WORD SERBIA.

London, Jan. 13.—The Serb Legation in London has addressed a letter to the press and public, urging the adoption of the spelling "Serbian" "Serbia" instead of "Servian" and "Servia."

"The latter spelling," says the Legation spokesman, "is slightly offensive to our people, mainly because it suggests the false derivation from the Latin root meaning 'to serve.' It is a source of hidden pain to Serbians to see that some journals persist in using the corrupt forms."

The same letter requests wider publication and performance of the Serbian national hymn, "In restaurants and public places we hear the British patriotic songs and hymns, together with those of your allies, France, Russia, Belgium and Japan; yet alas, not that of Serbia which is really a beautiful piece of music."

A Mad World.

While seated in my warm abode I see John Doe pass up the road, that man of many woes; he wears one rubber and one shoe, the windy blast is blowing through his whiskers and his clothes. He has no place to sleep or eat, his only refuge is the street, his shelter heaven's vault; I see him in the storm abroad, and say, "But for the grace of God, there goes your Uncle Walt." John Doe with gifts was richly blest; he might have distanced all the rest, had Fortune kindly been; but Fortune put the kibosh on the efforts of the luckless John, and never wore a grin. I wonder why an Edgar Poe found life a wilderness of woe, and starved in garrets bare, while birds who cannot sing for prunes eat costly grub from golden spoons, and purple raiment wear. I wonder why a Robert Burns must try all kinds of shifts and turns to gain his daily bread, while a Southey basked at ease and stuffed himself with jam and cheese, a wreath upon his head. Such things have never been explained; I know not why it is ordained that I find life a snap; and gazing from my door I see John Doe, in speechless misery, a homeless, hungry chap.

AFTER LIFE.

Sir Oliver Lodge, in an address at Browning Hall, London, said that his belief in the survival of the soul after death was based on scientific grounds.

"I say it, because I know that certain friends of mine still exist, because I have talked to them. Communication is possible. One must obey the laws, find out the conditions. I do not say it is easy, but I say it is possible, and I have conversed with them as I could converse with anyone in this audience now. Being scientific men they have given proof that it is real, not impersonation, not something emanating from myself. They have given definite proofs. Some of them are being published, many are being withheld for a time but will be published later.

"I tell you with all the strength of conviction which I can muster, that the fact is so, that we do persist, that these people still take an interest in what is going on, that they still help us and know far more about things than we do, and that they are able from time to time to communicate. I know this is a tremendous statement—a tremendous conclusion. I don't think any of us, I don't think I myself realize how great a conclusion it is.

"It is not for everybody to investigate everything, but if persons give 30 or 40 years of their life in this investigation they are entitled to state results which they have arrived at. You must have evidence, of course. The evidence—such as we have got—is recorded in the volumes of a scientific society, and there will be much more evidence. The evidence is not a matter for casual conversation; it is a matter for serious study, and the conclusions that may be arrived at may be delayed.

"The conclusion is that the survival of existence is scientifically proved by careful scientific investigation, and that of itself leads us to a perception of the unity running through all states of existence. That is why I say that man is not alone and that I know he is surrounded by other intelligences. And if you once step over the boundary there is no limit to the higher intelligences, until you come to the Infinite Intelligence Itself. There is no stopping. You must go until you come to God."
