Smart Young Maiden.

Sir Walter Parratt, the organist recently celebrated his eightieth birthday, is fond of telling the story of how a fair visitor to the Castle "got one back" nicely on a bandsman who was showing her round. A number of stars upon the cuff of a passing veteran aroused the young lady's curiosity.

"He's the battalion astronomer," explained the escort gravely. "Most useful man. Guides us home by the stars when we've lost our way on night manoeuvres."

"How interesting," said the maiden. Then, noting his bandsman's badge-"I suppose that thing on your arm
